Jail Guard Suspended In Prisoner Death Probe

Attendant Admits He Used Towel to Subdue Inmate; Six Investigations Begin

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

A District Jail guard was suspended yesterday after he admitted wrapping a towel around the neck of inmate Leroy Davis Friday night during a struggle in which Davis died.

James E. Kirkpatrick, 33, 1229 Savannah pl. se., was forced to take annual leave, Director of Corrections Donald Clemmer said, for using "improper custodial methods" and pending further investigation.

The District Commissioners joined five Government agencies which pressed separate investigations during the day.

Report on Tests Awaited

Microscopic tests of Davis' brain tissue were scheduled to determine whether the prisoner died of strangulation, Deputy Coroner Dr. Christopher J. Murphy said.

FBI agents and Homicide Squad detectives interviewed six prisoners and three guards.

The Commissioners heard a preliminary police report on Davis' death at their meeting yesterday, Charles Stofberg, special assistant to Commissioner John Russell Young said. At the end of the meeting Superintendent of Police Robert J. Barrett was ordered to continue his investigation, Stofberg said.

Kirkpatrick made two statements for police, one on April 28, the night of the death, and one Wednesday after the investigations had started.

In the first statement, no mention was made of the towel, Kirkpatrick said, "Inmate Davis had been causing a lot of diturbance" and he called a Gallinger intern. When the cell door was opened, Kirkpatrick said, Inmate Davis walked out on the range in a quiet manner and all at once he pushed me against the bars, cutting my shoulder, and started running up the range."

"I caught him at about middle way . . . and we both started to struggle and fell to the floor, hitting my shoulder and back against the bars," Kirkpatrick stated.

After he had called two other guards for help "the three of us were holding inmate Davis for (the) intern to administer a sedative, when the inmate collapsed," he added.

In his supplementary statement Kirkpatrick said Davis "showed the strength of a crazy man."

"When he and I fell to the floor he attempted to bite me several times and also hit his head on the floor. I happened to see an inmate nearby with a towel on his shoulders and asked him for the towel in order to hold the man's head up and to keep him from

Radio, TV Stocks Drop $1 to $4 In Heavy Trading

New York, May 4 (AP).—Radio-television stocks dropped with a thud in today's market.

Selling pressure was evidently sparked by unfavorable retail sales reports, including a sooner than expected summer slump in demand.

Zenith Radio lost $4.12 a share at $56.37; Radio Corp., 87 cents at $20.75; Philco, $3.12 at $47.12; Admiral, $2 at $31.87; Emerson, $2.75 at $33.50, and Motorola, $2.75 at $44. Some final prices were above the lows of the session—Zenith, for instance, was down more than $5 at one time.

Aircraft and motor stocks were also under pressure in a generally lower market.

Race Service Stalls Probe, Tobey Charges

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Senator Tobey (R., N. H.), charged yesterday that officials of the big race news agency, Continental Press Service, are trying to lead Senate gambling investigators "down a blind alley."

Tobey, exasperated as the inquiry tried without success to trace all channels through which track information flows to the Nation's bookie joints, urged the return of Continental officials for questioning.

"Put the pressure on them to give us the lowdown on this thing," the New Hampshire legislator proposed.

But the investigation shut down its hearing indefinitely on schedule. It has been studying legislation to halt the flow of gambling information across State lines. Soon a special Senate committee will launch an over-all inquiry into organized gambling and crime rackets in general.

Chairman McFarland (D., Ariz.) agreed with Tobey that "we must complete this chain" of race news movement. He said the investigators are still at work on information which will go into the record later.

Continental has listed 24 news agencies receiving its service, adding that if others use it the information was being "bootlegged" without Continental's knowledge.

The Western Union Telegraph Co. has told the inquiry that its lists of circuits leased for racing news shows 17 names not on Continental's list. Senators are trying to find out where the 17 get their news.

Tobey's criticism came after the committee got a partial picture of how a smaller race news service operates.

Two Kansas City witnesses, Tano Lococo and Eddie (Spitz) Osadchey, told about their Standard News Service in which they had as a partner the mobster and former convict, Charles Gargotta. The latter was shot down recently after he had spilled information to a Federal grand jury about an alleged $34,500,000-a-year gambling racket in Kansas City.

Lococo and Osadchey weren't talking about this reported big-time racket, pleading possible self-incrimination.

But as to the Standard News Service, Osadchey said it grossed $40,000 last year on a $7500 investment—turning out a net profit of $20,000. He said the money was put up by him, Lococo, Gargotta and Morris Klein, now serving a vote-fraud term in prison.

Standard got its racing news, they said, from General News Service Bureau in Chicago.

A Western Union official has produced records to show that General is tied to a Continental wire through an unidentified third concern. However, Continental

Pakistan Is Barren Ground For Communism, Premier Says

By Marshall Andre
Post Reporter

Pakistan's Prime Minister Liaquat Ali Khan found time in a busy day yesterday to reiterate his conviction that his country would provide barren ground for the seeds of communism.

The Moslem "way of life," he said repeatedly, in a news conference, before Congress and at a National Press Club luncheon, presents no openings for lodgment of totalitarian ideologies. Pakistan is largely Mohammedan.

The swarthy and stockily built head of the Pakistan government, clad in a dark business suit and small fur hat which never left his head, got off to a slow start when the Senate took 30 minutes to drone through its roll call. Scheduled to speak before that body at 12:05 p. m., Liaquat Ali actually got started at 12:30, a circumstance which made him late to his

Two Changes Urged in Rules On Milk Sales

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

District Commissioners have scheduled a meeting of area milk producers Thursday morning which may substantially alter milk marketing methods.

Called at the recommendation of the Health Department, the session will consider two related matters:

1. Whether the ban on importation of milk and cream from farms not inspected by the Health Department should be reimposed June 30, as announced last December, or delayed.

2. Whether the District's present requirement that all dairy farm utensils be sterilized by steam be amended to permit sterilization by chemicals—a less costly method authorized by the health departments of several cities.

In the fall of 1942 the ban on the sale of milk produced on farms outside the Washington milkshed which were not inspected by the city department was lifted. This came after the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association de-

Teamwork Halts Train, Saves Car, Autoists on Track

Two passengers of car stalled on railroad track at 9th and Michigan ave. ne., probably owe their lives to the teamwork between a train and police dispatcher.

Early today police received an emergency call telling of the immobile auto. How or why they got there was not made plain. The railroad dispatcher was called by radio at Union Station, and the situation was described.

The crack B & O Shenandoah bound for Chicago had just left the station. The train dispatcher quickly called a control tower near the intersection which flagged down the train 100 yards from the crossing.

House Passes Amendment To Hatch Act

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

A 203-to-140 House vote yesterday approved a revised Hatch Act amendment and sent the compromise bill to the Senate.

One section of the bill overrules a long-standing regulation by the Civil Service Commission that requires Federal employe participation in local politics in the nearby areas of Maryland and Virginia to be on a nonpartisan or independent basis.

The section would leave with the Civil Service Commission discretion to say "yes" or "no" to the question of whether Federal employes in the vicinity of the Nation's Capital shall participate at all in local politics.

But if that question is answered "yes," then the Civil Service Commission would have to permit such local political participation in any and all political parties.

Nonpartisan groups — particularly in Arlington where their successess locally have been most marked—had sought to persuade a joint congressional conference committee to drop the section applying to Maryland and Virginia from the bill.

But the section had the support of Republican and Democratic local organizations in nearby areas. The controversial section was written by the Senate, after it was urged primarily by Virginia members. The conference group made one major change by deciding to

Plan to Cut Whisky, Beer Taxes Defeated by House Committee

The House Ways and Means Committee yesterday voted against any cut in Federal taxes on whisky and beer.

Working away on a proposed tax-cutting bill, the committee turned thumbs down on motions to:

1. Reduce the $9-a-gallon liquor tax to $7.50 a gallon. This would have trimmed Federal revenues by 200 million dollars. The whisky tax was raised $3 a gallon during the war.

2. Cut the $8-a-barrel beer tax by 50 cents a barrel. If approved, this would have relieved beer drinkers of about 40 million dollars a year in taxes.

No proposal was made yesterday to reduce wine excise imposts.

Yesterday's action kept intact the approximately $1,500,000,000 of revenue annually the Government collects from whisky and beer.

The committee earlier this week had approved a reduction from $3 to $2 a gallon in the tax on alcohol used in preparing medicines.

In drafting its bill, the committee has now approved reductions amounting to $1,065,000,000. They include cuts in the taxes on furs, jewelry, luggage, movie tickets, travel, and many other items.

Meanwhile, the House yesterday tentatively voted $622,134,130 cash and $38,250,000 contract authority for the Interior Department.

In so doing, it rejected overwhelmingly an attempt to trim funds for reclamation construction by 25 percent below budget estimates.

The Interior Department money is included in the omnibus 29-billion-dollar appropriation bill to finance more than 40 Federal agencies in the year starting July 1.

A final vote on the bill is expected next week.

War Danger Has Abated, Truman Says

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman, a self-styled optimist, is not alarmed over the world situation. He thinks there is less chance now of a shooting war between the United States and Russia than there was four years ago. Accordingly, the defense budget will be smaller next year.

He said at a news conference yesterday that he thought Senator Tydings (D., Md.), was unduly alarmed in a speech here Wednesday. Tydings, chairman of the Armed Services Committee, told the Rotary Club that it would be "remarkable" if the United States and Russia "can weather their disagreements without a conflagration."

Mr. Truman said he thought that the situation now is not nearly as bad as it was in the first half of 1946. He went on to add that he might be an optimist, but that one had to be an optimist to be President of the United States.

Defense Budget to Be Smaller

Asked if the budget for the Department of Defense would be increased because of "increased tension in the international situation," Mr. Truman said that the defense budget for next year—the fiscal year of 1952, beginning July 1—would be smaller than this year. He repeated that the Administration was not alarmed in any sense of the word.

It was the second time that the Chief Executive had faced reporters since the news conference was moved from his office in the White House to a fourth-floor room across the street in the old State, War and Navy Building.

The stage fright of last week was gone, and questions and answers flew back and forth across the room without a lull. In the space of 15 minutes, Mr. Truman answered questions dealing with Herbert Hoover, Harold Stassen, the Pepper-Smathers primary fight in Florida, Communists in Government, Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.), and Senator Taylor (D., Idaho).

Disagree With Hoover

He said that he did not agree with that part of Hoover's speech in New York last week in which the former President suggested a reorganization of the United Nations, with Russia and her satellites excluded.

He said that he fully supported the United Nations as an individual and as President, and would continue to do so as long as he is in the White House. The U. N., he pointed out, was organized for the purpose of discussing all problems with which nations are faced, in the hope of arriving at a peaceful settlement of these problems.

He said he agreed with that part of Hoover's speech calling for a mobilization of the moral forces of the world against the unmoral forces, and complimented him on it. As for relations between himself and Hoover, he said, they were perfectly friendly.

A good many of the questions dealt with domestic politics, and reflected mounting interest in the 1950 campaign. Carl McCardle of

Chrysler Strike Settlement Grants Union $100 Pensions

Detroit, May 4 (AP).—The long, costly Chrysler strike was settled today on a note of bitterness like that which marked its beginning 100 days ago.

But there was elation, too.

The 89,000 striking CIO United Auto Workers will begin going back to work Monday, with everything they asked in the way of a $100 monthly pension, (including Federal Social Security benefits), backed by a jointly administered trust fund.

The union got benefits it said equaled the "10-cents-an-hour package" it asked when the strike was called January 25. It failed however, to get a union shop and total benefits of 28 cents an hour that it demanded when negotiations on a new contract opened way back on July 6, 1949.

Bitterness marked negotiations from the walkout to settlement, and as today's signing was announced, UAW President Walter Reuther angrily told a press conference:

"Chrysler Corporation has sunk to a low never before attained in the auto industry. . . . As late as yesterday Mr. Weckler (Herman L. Weckler, Chrysler vice president and general manager) prostituted the facts."

Weckler repeated yesterday his charge that the UAW was stalling settlement to collect a maximum strike fund under $1 weekly assessments against working union members.

The 12-week assessment period ended yesterday. When all collections are in they will total approximately 7 million dollars, of which less than 3 million dollars already has been expended.

Reuther hotly denied Weckler's charge that the UAW prolonged the walkout to enlarge the strike fund. He blamed the settlement delay to Chrysler's "blind sefishness."

Weckler said in a statement today the strike need never have been called.

"A strike is not a victory for anybody," he declared.

"As regards pension and other benefits that the individual employe gets under the new contract," Weckler continued, "he could have got substantially these at the conference table without losing a single day's pay."

Estimates show that strikers averaged wage losses of $1000 each because of the walkout. With new 10-cent hourly gains it would take them 5 years to make up the lost pay.

The contract still must be ratified tonight by the union's national Chrysler conference, and by local unions in elections Saturday. Acceptance is a foregone conclusion. A UAW contract negotiated by Reuther never has been turned down.

Two Testified Remington Was Communist in 1936-37

By The Associated Press

A House committee produced testimony from two witnesses yesterday that William W. Remington, much investigated Government official, was a Communist in the '30's.

Remington denied it.

The 31-year-old Commerce Department economist was confronted with the testimony of two men, one an avowed former Communist organizer, at a hearing of the House Un-American Activities Committee.

Remington was informed that their accusations, which were read to him, had been received by the committee at a secret hearing two weeks ago.

Was it true, as those witnesses said, that he had been a Communist in 1936 and 1937 when he worked as a messenger for the Tennessee Valley Authority at Knoxville?

"No, sir," Remington told Frank C. Tavenner, jr., the committee counsel.

Once again, he told the committee that he is not and never has been a Communist.

When he made that statement at

Two-Year Extension of Draft Approved by House Unit, 31-0

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Legislation to extend the draft law and make possible a quick mobilization of the Nation's reserve forces and industrial facilities during the next two years was approved yesterday by the House Armed Services Committee.

By a vote of 31 to 0, the group sent to the House floor a bill continuing the present selective service law—with some changes—for 24 months beyond the present June 24 expiration date.

Any actual inductions, calls of reservists, or plant seizures provided under the mobilization measure, however, could not take place until Congress—by later action—declares a national emergency to exist.

Committee Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) said he would call up the bill for a House vote "just as soon as they give us room."

Top defense chiefs had strongly urged continuation of the draft as an essential mobilization readiness measure. If the present law was allowed to lapse, they declared, it would take many months to get a draft bill through, set up selective service boards, register, classify and induct men into the armed forces.

The bill approved yesterday would continue the selective service system, and require young men

200 College Boys Invade Dorms And 'Dunk' Coeds

Columbus, Ohio, May 4 (U.P.).—Some 200 men students invaded women's dormitories and sororities in unscheduled Ohio State University May Week activities today, doused pajama-clad coeds in showers and fled with girls' "unmentionables."

Five of the men were suspended indefinitely by the council of student affairs after the second invasion in as many nights.

The second raid got under way last night when 100 boys stormed through Baker Hall and tried to throw the coeds into the showers. However, many coeds, having weathered a similar experience Tuesday night, turned the tables and threw the invaders into the showers.

Tear gas was used to repulse the men at another girl's dormitory.

The horseplay sent four police cruisers to the university. Police said 25 or 30 men climbed a fire escape at the Pi Beta Phi Sorority, where one girl was injured slightly. There were no arrests.

The president of the sorority described the raid as "just a mob reaction."

Dewey Blasts At Fair Deal As 'Faro Deal'

New York, May 4 (AP).—Gov. Thomas E. Dewey blasted the Democrats tonight as the real "big money" party and accused them of tolerating spies, traitors and sex offenders in the Government service.

Dewey told a big State Republican dinner rally that the Democrats levied tribute from union treasuries and declared they "shake down wealthy playboys for Government jobs."

He linked "Kansas City" gunmen" with National Administration politics and asserted: "The Fair Deal is a faro deal for New York State. The people get trimmed every day."

"Today," Dewey said, "it is the Democrats who are the party of big money. Last year, in the New York City and State campaigns, they proved it by drenching the air with paid radio time and by full page advertisements in the papers. They spent at least $3 for every $1 of Republican money.

"But there are other differences . . . one big difference is that we Republicans believe in keeping our political promises—and we keep them faithfully.

"Another difference is that we really believe that spies and traitors belong in jail.

"We also believe that sex offenders and the like should be in prisons or mental hospitals and not in any part of the Federal Government.

"We believe that State elections should be decided by vote of the people and not by stolen paper ballots or by the pistols of gunmen in Kansas City clubhouses."

Adventists Vote to Organize For Defense and War Disaster

Seventh-day Adventists yesterday voted to organize for civilian defense and disaster relief in preparation for war.

Denominational schools, churches, and medical institutions will join in the program, which will stress stockpiling of medical and other supplies and training of church members to aid in war and peacetime disasters.

Carlyle B. Haynes, secretary of the Adventist War Service Commission, called for the program at a meeting of the general conference committee at world headquarters in Takoma Park.

He urged immediate adoption of the plan because of the expectation that "no declaration of war will precede the next world conflict. It will begin with a devastating atom bomb surprise attack on a target of military importance, not necessarily a military installation and quite probably a great city."

World headquarters will be one of the first places organized.

Elder J. Lamar McElhany, world president, urged that the Adventists "start right now" in the preparations. Atom-bomb raid drills will begin in the near future, denominational officials said.

Local and regional Adventist headquarters will be asked to establish relief organizations and to reactivate the wartime medical cadet corps.

The corps is a church-organized unit of young people trained to give medical aid in time of war. It was begun during the war to prepare young people for medical corps service, since Adventists accepted only noncombatant military assignments.

The program will cooperate with national, State and local civilian defense programs.

Probe to Get Information Demanded By M'Carthy

Sees No Precedent Set by Action; Bielaski Testifies On Amerasia Case

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The State Department loyalty files on Senator McCarthy's "81 cases" will be made available to Senate investigators, it was announced yesterday.

Senator Tydings (D., Md.), chairman of the investigating subcommittee, said that President Truman finally had agreed to let the subcommittee examine the files.

Mr. Truman felt, Tydings explained, that because of the past history of the 81 cases—the data in those files were examined two years ago by four Congressional committees—no precedent will be violated by letting a fifth committee look at the information.

The agreement applies only to the State Department loyalty files, and not to the FBI files, which McCarthy has also demanded be disclosed to the investigating Senators.

But since a full FBI "field investigation" had been run on most, if not all of the 81 persons, and since the data from those investigations are included in the State Department files, presumably all the pertinent FBI information will thus be included. The main omission will be only the actual names of the informants, contained in the FBI "raw files."

Some Not Included

The files that will be opened to the subcommittee, being confined to the 81 cases McCarthy discussed on the Senate floor the night of February 20, will not include those relating to persons he later named publicly.

There were ten of these, including the "key case" of Owen Lattimore, and the important cases of John S. Service and Haldore Hanson.

McCarthy has repeatedly demanded that the files be made available, and insisted that if they were, his charges of Communist infiltration of the State Department would be proved.

He has further insisted, again and again, that one could be sure that if the files proved him wrong, Mr. Truman would have made them available long since.

Bielaski at Closed Session

Earlier in the day, before Tydings' unexpected announcement, his subcommittee heard in closed session its first witness on the 1945 Amerasia case, allegedly involving the "wholesale theft" of secret Government documents, and linking the theft to a man since described as a Communist.

The witness was Frank Bielaski, a former Office of Strategic Services employe who led a raid on the Amerasia magazine offices.

Late returns from Tuesday's bitter primary gave party loyalists a clear majority of the 72 places on the State Democratic committee.

U. S. Seizes Passport Of Atomic Scientist

New York, May 4 (AP).—Edward M. Corson, 28, of Chicago, who has acted as a consultant to the Atomic Energy Commission, complained today that a State Department agent had lifted his passport.

Corson, a research physicist, said his passport was picked up in his Hotel Statler room early today by a special agent of the State Department. Corson said he had intended to sail for France in a few days to lecture at the French Academy of Science.

In Washington the State Department said it had lifted Corson's passport on the grounds that the proposed trip would be "not in the national interest."

He said his publicly announced faith in Dr. Klaus Fuchs, German-born naturalized British subject convicted in London of turning over atomic energy secrets to the Russians, seemed to have aroused State Department suspicion on him.

In a letter to the magazine, Physics Today, March issue, Corson says Fuchs "was not a dear friend . . . but he was a fellow scientist. . . . In the worst case, I thought, he might be guilty of some naivete or indiscretion, but no treason—this was unthinkable."

In his letter to the magazine, Corson quotes a telegram he sent to Fuchs at Bow street jail, London, offering his services.

His letter gives Fuchs' reply: "Thank you, there is nothing you can do. The evidence will change your mind."

The April issue of the magazine says Corson formerly was with Illinois Tech's Armour Research Foundation and recently a Fulbright exchange professor at the University of Edinburgh, Scotland.

California U. Spying Probe Is Under Way

San Francisco, May 4 (AP). — The question of whether Communists engaged in atomic espionage at the University of California during the war is under scrutiny of the United States Department of Justice.

A Federal Grand Jury, convened on the order of the Attorney General, heard from eight witnesses yesterday in a brief and secret session.

United States Attorney Frank J. Hennessy said the investigation involved "a single person." He would not comment otherwise, except to add:

"We are acting on direct instruction from Washington in connection with an eastern investigation."

One of the witnesses said he had been asked "at least 20 questions" about personnel at the university —which is at Berkeley, across San Francisco Bay. He said he was asked if he knew Dr. Joseph Woodrow Weinberg, former lecturing physicist at the university.

Dr. Weinberg, now a professor at the University of Minnesota, was accused by the House Un-American Activities Committee last September of having disclosed atomic secrets to a Communist agent. At that time, he was designated merely as "Scientist X." Later, the committee identified him. Dr. Weinberg flatly denied the charges.

Among the eight called before the grand jury was Dr. Irving David Fox, young physicist assistant who was dismissed from the university several months ago. Fox and Weinberg formerly worked together in the radiation laboratory.

Two Say Remington Was Red

the outset of his testimony yesterday, he emphasized his words by adding:

"And when I say 'never', I mean never, whether at the age of 3, 18 or 32, which I am today."

Remington was about 18 when he worked at the messenger job for TVA.

On April 20, Tavenner told him, the committee questioned a Kenneth McConnell about that period in Remington's life. Tavenner said McConnell described himself as a Communist organizer, back in 1937, and a man who knew Remington.

Reading part of the transcript of McConnell's testimony, Tavenner brought out that McConnell had been asked if he knew Remington to be a member of the Communist party. Tavenner said McConnell replied: "I did."

Second Witness Testifies

Tavenner quoted from testimony by another witness, Howard Allen Bridgman, who was identified as a fellow-messenger when Remington worked for TVA. The gist of Bridgman's testimony was that he also knew Remington was a Red, had attended five or six Communist party branch meetings in his company, and that Remington took an active part in them.

Tavenner inquired again whether Remington had been affiliated with the Communist Party in any way, from September, 1936, until July or August of 1937.

"I was not," Remington replied calmly.

After Tavenner finished reading the testimony by McConnell, he observed that Remington's testimony appeared to be in conflict with it. He pointed out the seriousness of testifying under oath.

Earlier in the day, Remington has admitted having become acquainted with some Communists at the home of his mother-in-law, whom he did not name. But he said, and repeated, that anybody who says he is or has been a Communist either is ignorant of the facts, or is "engaged in a deliberate falsehood."

Suspended, Reinstated

Committee Chairman Wood (D., Ga.) had announced in advance that the new Remington investigation was based on evidence from "a highly confidential source." Hours passed before it was publicly announced who the previous witnesses had been.

Remington was suspended two years ago from his $9870 a year job, but was reinstated as an economist in the Commerce Department on another assignment after the Government's loyalty review board had cleared him.

His suspension grew out of testimony given to a Senate investigating committee by Elizabeth Bentley, who testified she once had been a courier for a Communist spy ring. She said Remington had passed government information to her. Remington said he had, but that the information was not secret and that he thought Miss Bentley was a reporter and was entitled to it.

He sued when she repeated her charges later on a television program, naming her, the program's producers and the sponsors as defendants. The suit was settled out of court, reportedly for $10,000.

"Unjust" To Call Him Again

Remington said he had hoped his loyalty would never be challenged again after the loyalty review board had cleared him and the libel suit had been settled for "a substantial sum."

The witness told the committee he could not help but feel it unjust to call him again.

"The right to be free from continued embarrassment is fundamental under our laws," he said. "In my case it is not merely double jeopardy; it is triple jeopardy."

His testimony, for the most part, was old and familiar material to reporters who covered his 1948 appearance before the Senate committee.

Once again he said that the mother of a girl he married in 1939 entertained Communists in her home, and that he met some Communists while they were in his mother-in-law's house.

One of them, he said yesterday, was Joseph North, editor of "New Masses." Through him, he said, he later met Jacob Golos, who in turn introduced him to Elizabeth Bentley.

Cafe Man Says Adler Aided Anti-Red Unit

Hartford, Conn., May 4 (AP).—A co-owner of the New York cafe society restaurant "21" testified today that Larry Adler and Paul Draper helped a World War II organization which was strongly opposed by Communists.

Maxwell Arnold Kreindler said in a deposition read in the trial of a $200,000 libel suit brought by Draper and Adler that the organization was called "Fight for Freedom." He stated it worked for American intervention against Germany during the Hitler-Stalin "honeymoon" of 1939-41.

Adler, a harmonica player, and Draper, a dancer, are suing Mrs. Hester McCullough of Greenwich, Conn. They charge that she injured their reputations and caused them to lose engagements by falsely describing them in a published letter as being pro-Communist.

Kreindler said both Draper and Adler appeared at rallies organized by "Fight for Freedom."

"The Communists hated our guts," his deposition said. "They didn't like what we did."

Pike Sees Need For Control of Atomic Energy

By Richard Morris

Post Reporter

Sumner T. Pike, acting chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, last night underscored what he called the need for "some kind of world control" of atomic energy.

The "basis" for such an end is the convertibility of atomic energy from weapons to peaceful uses and back to weapons "within a very few months by running it back through a power plant," he declared.

The AEC is definitely "making progress" in development of atomic energy for peaceful means, he told a dinner meeting of Inquirendo, a group of professional men interested in current affairs.

It May Be Expensive

"But whether we are making it fast enough or not, I don't know," he added.

Although the fuel "may be quite expensive," there will be "specialty operations" for nuclear fission, such as submarines powered by atomic energy, within five to eight years, Pike told an audience of 300 persons at the Mayflower.

But he warned his listeners not to get "too excited" about the possibility of having atomic energy perform the duties of coal, gas and oil.

"My own suspicion is we may never get the cost down to where the present cost of power is," he said in his informal speech at the formal gathering.

Since the United States no longer has a monopoly on the secret of the atomic bomb, he continued, "our hope now is to get a big enough store of better weapons" to make Russia "think twice before doing more than name-calling."

Difficult Problem

As for how much we know about Soviet progress with atomic energy, and how much they know about ours, he said:

"Sometimes it is very difficult to know you are in a race and not be able to see where the other fellow is."

Jeanne Palmer, Metropolitan Opera soprano, sang several selections at the stag dinner. The following recently elected officers were installed:

Joseph C. Fehr, president; Stanley K. Hornbeck, vice president; Bernard J. Gallagher, secretary-treasurer; William T. Croft, membership chairman, and Nelson T. Johnson, executive committee.

Truman to Release Files on McCarthy's '81 Cases' to Senate Inquiry

committee session, released a statement giving what he asserted were to be the highspots of Bielaski's testimony. Of these, the most startling was that six months before the A-bomb drop on Hiroshima, "the people who operated Amerasia, with the assistance of State Department personnel, were collecting and transmitting to Soviet Russia the secrets of the atomic bomb."

Bielaski, caught by reporters between sessions of the hearing, and shown that statement, commented:

"I can't say that. That word, 'transmitted' — there are some words there I should have to qualify."

He said, however, "there was something to the atomic aspect."

Last night the Department of Justice said in a statement:

"When the FBI made their investigation and their search of the Amerasia headquarters there was no information contained in any documents or otherwise relating to the a-bomb."

And if the OSS had gotten any such information, it was "never made available to the FBI or the criminal division of the Department of Justice."

Hitherto, the President has refused to release the files on the persons McCarthy accused, on grounds that disclosure of FBI data would breach promises made by FBI agents to persons who informed them that their identities would be kept secret.

Might Hamper FBI

Further, the Chief Executive argued, release of the files might smear the reputations of innocent men, hamper the FBI in future work and open up the possibility of irresponsible interpretation of the contents of the files.

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover and Attorney General J. Howard McGrath was adamant on these points in testimony before the Tydings subcommittee.

But earlier this week, Representative Karsten (D., Mo.) disclosed that all of McCarthy's 81 cases were taken from a list of 108 cases, compiled more than two years ago by an investigator from a House Subcommittee on Appropriations.

At that time, for reasons unexplained, the State Department permitted the investigator to examine its loyalty files, and to abstract them. The list he brought back to the Capitol caused a small furore.

The summary of the investigator, Robert Lee, ultimately was seen by the members of four Congressional Committees, in 1948. State Department personnel officials were called on to explain and did presumably, to the satisfaction of the Congressman. No further action was demanded, and no adverse reports were given to Congress.

Subsequently, the President established the Loyalty Review procedure and ordered that never again should departmental loyalty files be opened to Congress.

From the Administration's point of view, an ample illustration of the damage that comes from letting a congressional agent see the files is the fact that McCarthy apparently got hold of the old Lee list, whittled it down, and made his charges from it.

In the cases he cited, he repeated the 108 list, allegation for allegation and often word for word.

Why Truman Agreed

Tydings said yesterday that when Mr. Truman learned the facts that four committees and their attaches had seen the files two years ago, he agreed to make them available to the present subcommittee, feeling that no precedent would be set thereby.

But for the time being, at least, he will not make available any other files, for that, presumably, would set a precedent.

The subcommittee however, has already been given what was described as a complete and detailed summary of the FBI file on Lattimore, prepared by Hoover.

Tydings said he had had half a dozen White House conferences to work out a procedure by which the files could be made available. He added that the agreement was reached Thursday.

In his statement he said:

"I am happy, therefore, at the outcome which will permit the committee now to see the very files which Senator McCarthy asked the committee to examine when he made his charges on the radio, through the newspapers and on the Senate floor.

"It is to be hoped that during the coming week the committee may begin its examination of the files in connection with its other work and in due time make a full report to the Senate and the country about their contents."

McCarthy himself could not be reached for comment last evening.

The minority leader, Senator Wherry (R., Nebr.) jibed that President Truman was forced by public opinion to make the files available, and that he should have done it long before.

He did it, Wherry went on, doubtless because "he could not face the people with his argument for secrecy."

Now he must make the rest of the files available on the other persons named, and also all those of "moral perverts" in the State Department.

Members of the Tydings Subcommittee were close-mouthed yesterday on what they heard from Bielaski, the former OSS director of investigations.

Before the hearing began, McCarthy made public a copy of a letter he wrote to Tydings. He wrote that he felt compelled "to give the Senate and the American people a brief resume of the highlights of what yesterday's testimony" by Bielaski would be.

"The American people have waited too long to hear the evidence in the Amerasia case," McCarthy said in the letter.

He said Bielaski conducted the first night raid on Amerasia magazine headquarters in June, 1945—three months before the FBI stepped into the case—and found a vast number of "top secret" documents allegedly stolen from the State Department.

Six persons were arrested in the Amerasia case, but only three were indicted by a Federal grand jury. The charge was conspiracy to illegally remove Government documents. The Government later dropped the charge against one of the three indicted.

Philip Jaffe, editor of Amerasia, pleaded guilty and was fined $2500. Another defendant, Emmanuel Sigurd Larsen, a State Department employe, pleaded no defense and was fined $500.

In his letter to Tydings, McCarthy declared that Bielaski would testify as follows:

"1. That reports were discovered in the Amerasia office which showed that six months before the atomic bomb was dropped on Hiroshima the people who operated Amerasia, with the assistance of State Department personnel, were collecting and transmitting to Soviet Russia the secrets of the atomic bomb.

"2. That top secret State Department reports were found in the Amerasia office.

"3. That an extremely secret report marked 'for delivery by officer-messenger only to director of naval intelligence' was found in the Amerasia office.

"4. That reports were found in the Amerasia office showing that the interlocking directors of Amerasia and the Institute of Pacific Relations were undermining the Chinese Nationalist government and were collecting minute details of the anti-Communist armies.

"5. That reports were found in the Amerasia office which dealt with the intimate family relationships of the family of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek.

"6. That the immensity of this espionage operation was so great and the number of stolen secret documents so large that Mr. Bielaski took away 15 copies which were never even missed by Amerasia personnel before the FBI came back to conduct the raid three months later.

"7. That Mr. Bielaski had difficulty gaining entrance to the Amerasia office because crews were working all night in its huge photo lab photographing secret Government documents.

"8. That the scope of this operation was such that when the FBI agents raided the office three months later, the documents seen there by Mr. Bielaski were no longer there, they having been copied, removed, and replaced by others."

A Senator in a position to know what happened told newsmen that during its forenoon session, the inquiry committee did not reach any such testimony as McCarthy had predicted would be forthcoming.

However, Bielaski was recalled for another session in the afternoon.

Emerging later, Bielaski commented first that McCarthy's statement was an "enlargement."

Then, in carefully chosen words, he continued:

"Without regard to McCarthy or the evidence I've given the committee, of my own knowledge there' something to it."

The witness said, however, that the evidence in the case "closely shows a wholesale, well-established theft of Government secrets."

"The evidence is serious, very serious," he said.

Bielaski made it clear he had been warned by the Senate inquiry committee against disclosing any of the evidence he presented.

He said he didn't know McCarthy and had been called before the committee by subpena. He is now president of the Research and Security Corp., New York, a firm specializing in investigations and public relations.

Great Lakes Area Will Be Protected By 'Radar Fence'

NYHT News Service

Air Force officials yesterday reluctantly confirmed disclosures on Capitol Hill of plans to build a Great Lakes industrial area panel of their projected "radar fence" to safeguard northern approaches to the United States from surprise air attack.

They said it would consist of "secret" installations at Mason City, Iowa, East Farmington and Elkhorn, Wisc., and at a still undisclosed point northeast of Duluth, Minn.

Eventually, Air Force officials hope to link the new panel of its protective "radar fence" with recently established "air defense zones" in the Pacific Northwest and along the North Atlantic Seaboard.

The Atlantic air defense zone extends 200 miles offshore from the northernmost tip of Maine to Norfolk, Va., and any unidentified aircraft picked up by radar in this area more than 20 miles from shore will be intercepted and challenged by Air Force fighter planes. Similar precautions are in effect with respect to the so-called Seattle-Hanford, Wash., defense zone, which extends from the Canadian border southward to a point on the Pacific Coast opposite North Bend, Oreg., and eastward as far as Superior, Mont.

Russia Ends Return Of German POWs

Frankfurt, Germany, May 4 (AP). Russia tonight announced that repatriation of German war prisoners has been completed. The news chilled hundreds of thousands of Germans.

It killed the last hope of family after family that a missing father, husband or son might return from the war. The news came too late, almost midnight, for most Germans to learn of it immediately. Those who did were aghast.

Dr. Kurt Schumacher, West Germany's Socialist leader, declared: "There are hundreds of thousands of German prisoners still in Russia."

The official Soviet news agency, Tass, said that since Germany's surrender in 1945 the Soviet Union had repatriated 1,939,163 prisoners, including 58,103 discovered in 1947-49 among prisoners of other nationalities in the Soviet Union.

Two months ago the Russians said that virtually all German war prisoners except war criminals had been freed. German authorities asserted, however, the Russians still were holding some 400,000.

The United States and France accused the Russians April 25 of lying to hide the fate of hundreds of thousands of German prisoners still unaccounted for.

One of the questions left unanswered by the Tass announcement was the fate of Field Marshal Friedrich von Paulus, German commander captured at Stalingrad.

Von Paulus often has been rumored as the leader of a Russian-sponsored "Free German Army" of former prisoners. He has denied this in postcards to his family.

Schumacher told a reporter:

"It is monstrous news. This message is so unbelievable that one must doubt it is genuine.

"This story, if true, will make every Communist aim in Germany impossible," said the one-armed, one-legged Socialist who himself spent years in a Nazi concentration camp.

On Peace Mission

Stalin Held Unlikely To See Lie

By The Associated Press

Moscow dispatches yesterday made it appear doubtful Stalin will receive Trygve Lie personally when the United Nations Secretary General arrives in the Soviet Union on his mission to save world peace.

A dispatch that passed Soviet censorship put it this way: "Lie's statement that he would like to see Stalin while in Moscow was noted here. It is believed Lie would be received by Foreign Minister Andrei Vishinsky and perhaps by Deputy Prime Minister V. M. Molotov, if he asks."

It would be no surprise if Stalin cold-shoulders Lie. Stalin undoubtedly remembers an old wound inflicted by the Norwegian.

In 1936, at the height of the Soviet purge trials, Leon Trotzky fled to Norway, where he continued his attacks on the Soviet government. The Soviets wanted him back to place on trial with other victims of the purge.

Lie was Minister of Justice, and it was his office that refused to send Trotzky back. Lie gave Trotzky permission to leave Norway, which did not want to continue giving asylum to such a controversial figure.

Meanwhile, in Paris, chiefs of U. N. special agencies issued a formal declaration saying world peace depends on quick negotiation to settle major differences among U. N. members.

The declaration came after two days of meetings between the agency chiefs and Lie, who is flying to Moscow May 10.

15 Sicilians Killed in Blast

Catania, Sicily, May 4 (AP).—A salvage worker's hammer touched off 70 tons of old aerial bombs in a suburban field today and he and 14 fellow workmen were blasted to bits.

About 60 other persons were injured in the explosion, which wrecked walls and smashed windows over a wide area of Bicoca, on Catania's outskirts.

Bomb splinters and flying glass caused most of the injuries in this greatest disaster in the Catania area since the war swept through Sicily in 1943.

Polish Reds Get Key Jobs

Warsaw, May 4 (AP).—A top-level reorganization of the Polish government appeared today to be under way. Diplomatic sources said orthodox Communists were replacing former Socialists and members of other parties.

They cited today's announced appointment of Aleksander Zawadski as third vice premier; Antoni Bida, former director of the censorship bureau, as director of the office for religious affairs directly responsible to the council of ministers, and the promotion of Kasimierz Mujal from chief of the President's civil chancellory and state council chancellory, to minister of communal affairs.

It was believed the new ministry of communal affairs had been created to give effect to Parliament's decision in March abolishing previous forms of local administration and replacing them at all levels with "national councils" patterned upon the Russian model.

The present ministry of public administration is about to be liquidated and replaced by Mujal's new ministry, it was said.

Senate's Vote On Foreign Aid Set for Today

By The Associated Press

A Republican drive to slash up to one billion dollars off this country's foreign aid outlays was aimed directly yesterday at knocking out a 45-million-dollar request for President Truman's "Point Four" program.

Senator Wherry (R. Nebr.), in urging a billion-dollar cut in the next Marshall Plan installment, expressed particular opposition to the Administration plan to assist underdeveloped nations of the world.

"It's the same old give-away program we have been 'New-Dealing' in for the past 10 years," he said.

During that period, Wherry added, "our world-minded Government do-gooders" have spent 58 billion dollars on various foreign aid programs—which he said "does not include a dime for the shooting war."

While acknowledging that the European Recovery Program has done "some good," Wherry declared "the results obtained have been very expensive."

But Senator Lehman (D.-Lib. N. Y.), asserted that the GOP attempt to reduce the Marshall Plan next year would "invite the necessity for spending astronomically greater amounts at a later and more perilous time."

Senator Flanders (R., Vt.) meanwhile urged his GOP colleagues to vote for the full amount of the global foreign aid bill which totals $3,372,450,000,

The Vermonter said the Economic Cooperation Administration had established a "fine record of accomplishment" in aiding the recovery of western Europe and in checking the spread of communism.

Flanders' plea was echoed by Senator Benton (D., Conn.), who said "the Marshall Plan has placed us on the offensive in the struggle now at flood tide in western Europe."

Today the Senate is scheduled to start the showdown vote on the multibillion dollar foreign aid bill.

Reds Ease Curbs On Car Loading In West Berlin

Berlin, May 4 (AP).—British officials tonight said Russian Zone restrictions on railway freight loadings in West Berlin have been eased and may be lifted completely by Friday.

West Berlin shippers began loading their goods on freight cars in Western sectors this afternoon as word spread that the problem had been threshed out in East-West talks.

The Soviet-sponsored order required that West Berlin freight be trucked to the Soviet sector for customs inspection before being put aboard trains for West Germany.

The order paralyzed rail freight loadings in West Berlin yards.

British investigators reported that the apparent reason for the ban was a Russian purge of German inspectors suspected of taking bribes from smugglers.

In White Sea

British Ask Reds to Free Seized Ship

London, May 4 (U.P.).—Britain today asked Russia to release a fishing trawler seized by the Russians Monday, and began an inquiry to determine whether the British vessel was taken in international waters.

Sir David Kelley, British Ambassador to Moscow, was instructed to ask why the Etruria was boarded and taken by a Russian naval patrol to the Soviet port of Murmansk while the trawler was fishing in the White Sea.

The Etruria had a crew of about 20 men.

Shipowners sent radio inquiries to other trawlers, hoping to get information on the exact location of the Etruria when it sent a message saying, "A Russian naval party is boarding us."

[The Associated Press reported that the Russians claim their territorial waters extend 12 miles from their shores. But British fishing vessels are able to enter the White Sea outside this limit.

[Such "arrests" of fishing boats have been attributed to tightening security measures by the Russians to cover up defense works along the Soviet Union's Arctic and Baltic coastlines.]

Showdown Is Asked Over Downing of Plane

Senator Flanders (R., Vt.) yesterday urged "a showdown" with Russia over the shooting down of an American plane by a test in the United Nations.

Calling for an immediate and vigorous protest to the U. N., Flanders told the Senate it might cause the Russians to quit the world organization for good.

After reciting the conflicting Russian and United States versions of the Baltic airplane incident of April 8, Flanders told the Senate this "has given the American people serious concern."

He said the same type of incidents and diplomatic protests preceded World Wars I and II and added that the latest incident "represents a stepping up of the tension in the cold war, and like the whole history of the cold war, the initiative is in the hands of the Russians."

"They determine where the blow shall fall," he said. "They take the offensive; they initiate the incidents; we toil along in the rear and pick up the pieces."

Flanders said the United States "should and must take the initiative in bringing this latest attack into a clear-cut and decisive issue."

He quoted the U. N. charter to show that a protest could be made either to the Security Council or the General Assembly.

Russia may walk out or try to veto the protest, Flanders said, "but we should have a public examination before a world forum of critical incidents which if unexamined point toward the destruction of the peace of the world.

"It is a test of the United Nations which must be made," he declared, adding that "the time has come for a showdown."

Danger of War Is Less Now Than in 1946, Truman Feels the Philadelphia Bulletin asked this one:

"The other night Harold Stassen, who is president of the University of Pennsylvania and who, I believe, once aspired to the office you now hold, said that you were the 'cleverest politician and the worst President ever to be in the White House."

Mr. Truman laughed heartily, and at first declined to comment. Then he suggested that history would answer the question.

"If you are the cleverest politician ever in the White House," McCardle persisted, "do you think it is smart politics to call the President 'the worst President'?"

Mr. Truman, still laughing, said that it takes a politician to become President of the United States.

Asked whether Jimmy Roosevelt was right in saying he had "made peace" with the White House, the President said he never had any ill feeling toward him. He recalled that Jimmy supported him in 1948 after he was nominated, a remark that brought laughter, because of young Roosevelt's attitude before the nomination.

Mr. Truman, asked whether it was true that he would like to see Roosevelt elected Governor of California, merely replied that he would like to see a Democrat elected Governor.

Replying to another question, Mr. Truman said that he didn't think the defeat of Senator Pepper by Representative Smathers in a Florida primary election was a defeat for the Fair Deal. He said it was a Florida campaign and involved certain issues which have no bearing whatever on the National picture.

The President knocked down a report that Senator Taylor, running mate of Henry Wallace in 1948, had been invited to ride on his train when he goes through Idaho next week.

He said that he had not been invited, but was welcome to board the train when it reaches Idaho, the same as any other official. He said that no one had been invited to ride the train except members of the presidental party and newspapermen.

Mr. Truman was in a jolly mood until somebody asked him to comment on Senator McCarthy's statement that Gen. George C. Marshall was "incompetent and pathetic" as Secretary of State.

Scornfully, he said he would not comment on anything that McCarthy said, adding that it was not worthy of comment.

Joseph C. Harsch of the Christian Science Monitor asked him to comment on an argument being heard more and more frequently on Capitol Hill—that, in view of the budget deficit, the United States can no longer afford the Marshall Plan as presently contemplated.

Mr. Truman said that this was an old argument, one that had been used against the Marshall Plan from the beginning. The reason for the deficit, he said, was the failure of Congress to vote the necessary taxes to carry on the government. Since we are fighting a cold war, he continued, we have to use every means at our disposal and the Marshall Plan is the most important thing we have. It was, he added, much cheaper than a shooting war.

The President said that the recent visit to the White House of Trygve Lie, secretary of the United Nations, was simply a courtesy call, and that they did not discuss in detail Lie's forthcoming trip to Moscow.

Halt Asked in Arab Arms Aid

Fifty-one House members asked Secretary of State Acheson yesterday to obtain Britain's promise that all arms shipments to the Middle East will be halted until a peace treaty is signed by the Arab states and Israel.

They added in a letter to Acheson that the United States and Great Britain should join efforts to bring about such a treaty.

The lawmakers—30 Democrats and 21 Republicans—proposed that the Secretary seek those two objectives in his talks with British officials later this month.

They asked Acheson to seek information on what arms shipments the British have made to Arab states, how much has been paid for the materials, and whether United States funds financed their original purchase.

"We believe," they said, "that it would be most helpful if the United States declared its policy to be opposed to a Near East arms race or a renewal of Arab-Israeli hostilities, and that technical assistance under Point Four projects could only be made available to Arab states which were at peace."

Cairo, Egypt, May 4 (AP).—Secretary-General Abdel Rahman Azzam Pasha of the Arab League denounced today a proposal of 51 members of the United States House of Representatives to make aid to Arab nations conditional on peace with Israel.

MacArthur Rejects Soviet Stand on Base Enlargement

Tokyo, May 4 (U.P.). — Gen. Douglas MacArthur today dismissed a Russian complaint against the development of military bases in Japan and Okinawa as "a vehicle of propaganda or a provocative impertinence."

"I cannot accept the integrity of intent of your letter," MacArthur said in a flat — and almost contemptous—rejection of the protest sent him by Lieut. Gen. Kuzma Derevyanko, Soviet member of the Allied Council.

To Derevyanko's demand for an explanation of the military base situation, MacArthur said:

1—Both the United States and Great Britain will continue to maintain bases in Japan for the duration of the occupation "in a condition of such adequacy and prepardedness as will insure the fullest security and operational efficiency, and the most complete readiness for any eventuality."

2—Insofar as Okinawa is concerned, that island and the Ryukyu group of which it is a part are "subject entirely to United States Government direction and operation" and it is none of Russia's business what goes on there.

in our own modern cleaning plant

Yes, the man has a vacuum cleaner. He goes over your garments carefully for loose dust and lint. Whatever he finds in your pockets, he puts in sealed envelopes for safekeeping. (The things we find in your pockets . . .) Also he removes buttons and such that might be damaged in cleaning.

Now we're ready for cleaning. The wet or dry method may be used, depending on the fabric, color and other factors. In either case, the cleaning is gentle but very thorough.

Next your garment goes to the spotter, where stubborn spots are taken out. Pressing comes next . . . with linings and pleats getting hand work.

Now your garment is ready for inspection. Sherlock, himself, could pick up pointers from our inspectors. When they are satisfied, your garments are packed with care and sent on their way to you.

This is the time of year when your clothing needs our Cleaning Service . . . a call to DIstrict 5300 will bring that service to you promptly.

New Canadian Jets to Be Seen Here Tuesday

Ottawa, May 4 (U.P.)—Two new Canadian jet planes, the RCAF's all-weather CF-100 fighter and the Avro jetliner, will be demonstrated to the United States Air Force next Tuesday, Defense Minister Brooke Claxton announced today.

The speedy planes, both manufactured by A. V. Roe Canada, Ltd., will fly to Washington during the weekend. They will be demonstrated Tuesday at Andrews Air Base to top officers of the United States Air Force and Government officials.

Foreign Jet Transports Seen for Routes Here

Foreign-made planes may be the first jet transports to fly on domestic air routes, it appeared yesterday.

United States airlines originally had hoped to borrow Air Force B-45 jet bombers for experimental use as domestic transports, but the Budget Bureau has ruled that "commercial" models must be used.

Senators Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.) and Owen Brewster, (R. Me.) now have introduced a bill calling for a $12,500,000 appropriation for the Civil Aeronautics Administration to test and modify new types of planes, especially jets.

The bill would earmark at least one million dollars of the fund in flying jet planes over domestic routes, without passengers, to gather operations costs and other data.

Government sources said U. S. lines either must wait until the bill is enacted and some manufacturer builds the jet transports or, they can obtain foreign jets. British and Canadian manufacturers already have jets flying.

Preview Set For Airport's New Lights

Members of the press will get a preview of National Airport's new system of "slope line" landing lights when they are turned on Friday night at 7 p. m.

They will be officially "commissioned" later this month, according to the Civil Aeronautics Administration.

The two rows of high intensity lights, begun two years ago and costing $139,000, extended 3500 feet into the Potomac River from the north-south runway.

The funnel-shaped design will aid pilots in bad weather and night landings by showing visually when they are off course vertically or horizontally in their approach.

Group Votes To Keep Draft

to register and be physically examined. Thus, in a sudden emergency, those classified 1-A could be ordered into uniform after declaration of an emergency by both Houses of Congress.

As under the present law, all young men aged 18 through 25 must register—if they have not already done so—and take a physical exam. At present, those 19 and older can be called for 21 months military training and service, but no one actually has been called since January, 1949, because the number of volunteers has exceeded vacancies.

Bill's Provisions

Under the bill, once Congress declares an emergency:

The President can call in all reserves and retired members of the armed services, as well as men subject to draft, for 21 months in uniform.

Exercise the powers to mobilize industry and seize plants provided in the 1948 Selective Services Act.

The bill drops the provisions of the present law permitting 18-year-olds to volunteer for one-year training in the United States and older men to volunteer for 21-month terms. Any reserve under 19, the bill provides, could be released upon his own application or that of his parents or guardians.

Marine Reserve Officers Start Convention Today

The first postwar national convention of the Marine Corps Reserve Officers Association will begin a two-day stand at Hotel Washington today.

An estimated 150 delegates are expected to hear Senator 'Paul H. Douglas (D., Ill.) address a luncheon meeting today at which President Harry C. Byrd of the University of Maryland will receive the association's Service Award "for constant devotion to the interests of National Defense and the United States Marine Corps and the Marine Reserve."

Senator Brien McMahon, chairman of the Congressional Joint Committee on Atomic Energy, will be featured speaker at an evening session starting at 6:30 o'clock.

Nehru Urges Policy Tieup

New Delhi, India, May 4 (AP).—Indian Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru today urged a change in the "poisonous atmosphere" between India and Pakistan and said the two countries should have common foreign and defense policies.

Nehru told a joint meeting of Indian and Pakistani newspaper editors that the two neighbors, by following a common policy, can play a large part in Asian and world affairs.

India and Pakistan, he said, "in a hundred ways are so closely connected that this is the natural, inevitable course for them to follow."

He added that this was necessary "not merely from an idealistic but a sheer opportunistic point of view."

He urged that fear and suspicion be removed from the minds of the Hindu and Moslem minorities, whose communal clashes along each country's borders have grown into threats of war, a religious conflict fanned into open flame when the two countries gained their independence from the 300-year British rule.

Dutch Reds Routed As 1st U. S. Arms Arrive

Rotterdam, The Netherlands, May 4 (AP).—The first United States arms shipment to The Netherlands under the North Atlantic Pact was unloaded today.

Police broke up a Communist demonstration, mostly by middle-aged women, before unloading began on the guarded docks. One man in the demonstrating group was cut by a saber.

The 450-ton cargo included anti-aircraft guns, ammunition, signal equipment and spare parts.

Pakistan Declared Anti-Red

Press Club engagement and deprived him of all but a few hasty bites of his lunch.

Before his appearance before the Senate and the House, he held a news conference at Prospect House, where he is staying in Georgetown.

Lays Wreaths

After gulping his lunch and speaking at the Press Club, he went to Mount Vernon and Arlington National Cemetery, where he laid wreaths on the tombs of George Washington and the Unknown Soldier.

With him throughout the day, except at lunch, was his wife, the Begum Liaquat Áli, clad in a flowing and colorful oriental costume with a silk shawl over her dark hair. The Begum held her own news conference at Prospect House after telling reporters, "I am interested in the women of America and I'm sorry only men are standing in front so I can't see them." Seated at the desk of Senator Watkins (R., Utah), she was introduced to the Senate by Vice President Alben Barkley and received an uproarious standing welcome.

Last night the Prime Minister was the dinner guest of Secretary of State Dean Acheson at Anderson House, 2101 Massachusetts ave.

On the touchy question of relations between Pakistan and India, the Prime Minister was generally noncommittal but, when he did express himself, was hopeful. Pakistan, he said, was prepared to accept the verdict of a United Nations directed plebiscite to determine the disposition of the disputed territory of Kashmir, but deplored the "inordinate delay" in getting the plebiscite started.

On other matters in question between the two countries, he said, there has been "anxiety" but no inclination on either side to use any but friendly methods to reach a solution.

Pakistan Must Be Strong

Nevertheless, said he, so long as uncertainty, unrest and conflicting ideologies prevail, Pakistan must maintain a strong defensive posture in which it would like the help of modern equipment from the United States. He added in his Press Club talk:

"Having established an independent state after many years of struggle against forces that either would not or could not see any sense in what we regarded as a life-and-death struggle for us, the last thing that the Pakistanis are likely to acquiesce in is that the slightest dent should be made in the territorial integrity of their country."

The Prime Minister repeated again and again that the aim of his government was to guarantee to all citizens "fundamental human rights, equality of status and opportunity and, before law, social, economic and political justice, freedom of thought, expression, belief, faith, worship and association," a sentiment which brought hearty applause from the House of Representatives.

The "Islamic way of life," he cautioned, should not be construed as "religious intolerance, theocratic rule, return to medievlism," or establishment of special privileges for Moslems or anyone else.

Fight to Finish

Dixie Bloc Says It's Set For FEPC Tilt

Southern Senators announced yesterday they are "ready to go" in a finish fight against fair employment practices legislation.

Senator Richard B. Russell (D., Ga.) said after a Dixie strategy conference that Southerners are ready if Senate Democratic Leader Scott W. Lucas (Ill.) seeks to bring up FEPC today as he has announced.

The Southern bloc was joined for the first time yesterday by Senator Estes Kefauver (D., Tenn.), who did not take part in filibuster efforts against FEPC last year.

Lucas expects to move late today—after passage of the foreign aid bill—to take up FEPC. That means the filibuster will start Monday and continue until broken by "cloture" votes or until the Administration and Republican supporters surrender.

Yesterday's strategy meeting was called in the wake of these developments:

1. Chairman John L. McClellan (D., Ark.) of the Executive Expenditures Committee told reporters he would try to get the Senate to act first on resolutions to kill some of Mr. Truman's reorganization plans which become effective May 23 unless vetoed by either the House or Senate.

2. Chairman Burnet R. Maybank (D., S. C.) warned that his Senate Banking Committee will not have time to consider a rent control extension while the FEPC fight is in progress.

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

Federal Security Administration and Labor Department champions yesterday squared off before a Senate Labor and Welfare Subcommittee in a contest for the right to run the Administration's vocational rehabilitation program.

The halt, lame, blind and deaf jammed the Capitol hearing room to watch or listen to the expected battle of Fair Deal giants, Secretary of Labor Maurice Tobin and Federal Security Administrator Oscar R. Ewing.

Tobin showed up in person, but Ewing was out of town. In his place appeared G. Lyle Belsley, FSA's commissioner for special service, flanked by experts, and buttressed by a 76-page volume of testimony and a roomfull of charts and diagrams.

FSA and Labor Department are agreed that more and better services to be provided for the nation's civilian disabled. Each agency believes the best job would be done by having it operate the program, most of which is presently run by Federal Security Agency.

Labor Secretary Tobin argued that the most important part of a program for the disabled should be job training and job placement, and that for these ends, his agency was best equipped to handle the assignment.

FSA Commissioner Belsley asserted that his agency had completely rehabilitated 58,000 handicapped persons last year, including the palcement of each in a remunerative occupation. Of these 58,000 disabled, 76 percent had been unemployed; 14 percent had never worked; 62 percent were dependent on others; 9 percent were on public assistance.

Belsley estimated that in less than five years after rehabilitation the 58,000 will pay back in income taxes more money than the Federal Government spent in helping them back to their feet.

Court Rules Out Dairies' Reports in Milk Conspiracy Trial

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

The Government ran into difficulty yesterday in laying the foundation for its conspiracy case against the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association and seven area dairies.

Robert H. Winn, special assistant to the Attorney General, who is prosecuting the groups in District Court, lost out on some of his attempts to place copies of association minutes, reports, memorandums and contracts in the record.

In a few instances Judge Alexander Holtzoff admitted them, but only against the association and not the dairies. Several exhibits, whose contents have not yet been read in court, were marked for identification only at this time.

Winn frankly told Judge Holtzoff it was difficult to show evidence of a "continuing conspiracy" extending over the past 20 yars if material was limited to that of the 3-year statute of limitation period before the March 8, 1948, indictment.

The judge replied that exhibits would be admitted if they tended to show the alleged conspiracy existed in the statutory period.

Thus far Winn has questioned only one witness, William B. Hooper, office manager of the association. When the trial resumes at 11:30 a. m. today, William E. Leahy, counsel for Bruce B. Derrick, secretary-treasurer of the association, will continue his cross-examination of Hooper.

Yesterday, in the second day of trial, Winn led Hooper through an explanation of how the 35-million-dollar a year milk industry is run here.

Hooper explained that all milk from the association's members goes into a common pool and the dairies decide how much will be used for each purpose: Class 1—fluid milk; Class 2—manufactured into cream and cottage cheese; Class 3—ice cream and similar products.

At the end of the month an audit is made of how all dairies under contract used the total milk, and each producer is paid on the basis of what share of the supply he contributed, Hooper testified. Payment by the dairies to the association varies according to how much they used in each classification, with the higher the class, the higher the payment.

This milk is limited to that produced by members who hold District Health Department permits, he emphasized. This rule was waived in the fall of 1942, when a shortage of locally inspected milk developed, Hooper said. It is scheduled to be reimposed June 30.

The association and distributors received authority from the Health Department to import such milk, Hooper said. Such milk was automatically graded class 3, while the D.C.-inspected shipments continued in the higher, more lucrative classes, unless turned into ice cream, Hooper said.

If, however, there was not enough local milk for the top two classes, the imported supply could be put in the higher groups, he pointed out.

Judge Holtzoff then said he was "not clear on why the association audits the purchases of outside milk." Hooper said this was done so as to apportion the proper price for local milk.

Hooper favored the utilization pricing of milk over selling at a flat rate. He declared the latter encouraged "bootlegging" of non-D. C.-inspected milk for the lower classification uses.

Judge Holtzoff asked whether it wouldn't, however, give "the housewife a better price?" Hooper replied that theoretically this was true. He agreed with the judge that it would "only swell the profits of the distributor" and not aid the consumer.

In his cross-examination, Leahy drew from Hooper denials that association meetings covered in minutes submitted in evidence by the Government were illegal. The Government has charged the meetings were to arrange price-fixing at retail levels.

Hooper said the board of directors met to set "a fair price" based on various indices of farmer costs. Then when the price was set, meetings were held with distributors to inform them of the change and frequently to indulge in "some bargaining," Hooper said.

Hooper defended the District health regulations as in the public interest and denied they were for limitation of competition.

Milk Market Changes Urged

clared it could not meet demands with only D. C.-inspected milk.

Late last year the Commissioners decided to reimpose the ban on June 30 when the association assured them it could meet area needs with D. C.-inspected milk produced on farms checked quarterly by the department.

Walter W. Burdette, director of the Health Department Bureau of Food Inspection, has raised the question whether when the present milk "flush" season runs out, the supplies near by will be adequate.

Yesterday Bruce B. Derrick, secretary-treasurer of the association, reiterated that the accredited producers would bring in sufficient supplies.

Burdette recommended that city officials consider, in this connection, the wisdom of changing a 1925 Health Department interpretation of his bureau's dairy farm score card.

This interpretation, which has become departmental policy, requires sterilization of tanks, cans, pails, strainers, coolers and thermometers in a temperature of at least 180 degrees Farenheit for a half hour. It is the largest single item on the farm score card.

Such requirements make it necessary for many farmers to build up the steam and keep it at the proper temperature, Burdette explained. For this reason, some nearby producers have been sending their milk to Baltimore and Philadelphia markets instead of here.

There farmers are permitted to use either steam or chemical sterilization, he declared. He pointed out, too, that current United States Public Health Service recommendations call for either type and in some cities, chemical sterilization is made mandatory, rath than steam.

The Ham that's REALLY Different!

It's different because, for more than a century, the John Morrell Company has specialized in obtaining fine hams from select corn-fed porkers, preparing them by its own proven method, and cooking them according to its own secret formula that "seals in" their luscious tenderness and choice flavor.

—and here are the reasons WHY!

Natural Dry-Heat Baked

Morrell's method of dry-heat baking is the preferred way because it seals in the natural flavor. It is vastly superior to steam cooking because no moisture ever touches the ham in the cooking process. Also, dry-heat baking retains the E-Z Cut Ham's tenderness and firm, appetizing texture.

Minimum Shrinkage

In contrast to steam-cooked ham, dry-heat baking takes out most of the cooking shrinkage, so you get a maximum of meat. Laboratory analyses actually show that E-Z Cut Ham has less moisture content and shrinks less than other hams on the market. $-for-$, it's a great meat "buy."

Less Bone—Fat—Skin

Morrell's preparation of this top-quality ham calls for trimming, skinning and leaving it with a much shorter-than-average shank. This assures more food value per pound. In other words, despite its slightly higher price, E-Z Cut Ham's "on-the-table" cost gives greatest value.

Rieve's 'Purge' of Baldanzi Is Voted Down At Convention of Textile Workers' Union

Boston, May 4 (AP).—George Baldanzi, executive vice president of the big CIO Textile Workers Union since its formation in 1939, today was reelected despite strong opposition by the organization's other top officers.

The 43-year-old Paterson, N. J., union leader drew 1038 votes to 742 polled by Mariano S. Bishop of Fall River, Mass.

The hotly-contested campaign for the $13,500 post split the sixth biennial convention into two bitter factions.

Rieve Is Unopposed

Rieve was nominated yesterday, without opposition, to serve another term in the $16,000-a-year presidency of the 400,000-member union. He has told the sixth biennial convention:

"One wheel of our team has fallen away and I want to replace that dead wheel with someone else so that we can go on and work together again. It's as simple as that. All I can tell you is that our organization cannot continue with Baldanzi as executive vice president. It is just that human beings sometimes reach the conclusion that they cannot work together."

Both have held their posts since formation of the union in 1939.

Rieve's spearhead against Baldanzi in the two hours allotted the Bishop forces was followed by an attack from H. D. Lisk, State director in Georgia.

Accusation Denied

Lisk charged that Baldanzi had told him to stop "criticizing the Ku Klux Klan" and added:

"It disqualifies Baldanzi as executive vice president when he tells me not to criticize the Ku Klux Klan in that part of the Southland where the Ku Klux Klan burns crosses and beats organizers."

During the two hours allotted to the Baldanzi forces, Baldanzi replied:

"There's no foundation of fact in that charge. Everyone knows how our union stands on that question and everyone knows exactly the problem that we have in the Southern part of the country."

Baldanzi, one-time coal miner and Paterson, N. J., millworker, was lifted smiling to the shoulders of supporters and carried around the convention hall in a noisy parade.

A member of the CIO executive council, director of the CIO's Southern organizing drive, Baldanzi holds the Star of Solidarity medal presented by the government of Italy for his services in behalf of Italian rehabilitation.

5250 New Signs Are on Order For D. C. Traffic

Soon the offending motorist's defense that he "didn't see" the traffic sign will hold less water than ever.

A total of 5250 brand-new, shiny signs is now in the process of manufacture by the Fred S. Gichner Iron Works, Inc., to replace battered signs and for additional installation.

Small signs cost the District 38½ cents apiece and the larger ones, $1.17. The signs are furnished in blank and are lettered in the District's own sign shop.

Chrysler, UAW Settle Strike

Philadelphia, immediately called back workers. Besides Chrysler's 89,000 production workers the strike idled 50,000 in supplier plants.

This second longest and costliest strike in the history of the automotive industry cost Chrysler workers a total of nearly 85 million dollars in lost wages. Altogether it cost the company, its workers, its 10,574 dealers and supplier firms and their employes some $1,383,000,000.

Car and truck production losses were estimated at 490,000, but Chrysler's return to production is expected to boost this month's auto industry output across the Nations to an unprecedented 750,000 units.

Here's what Chrysler workers had, demanded and got:

Pensions—Had none; asked $100 monthly (including Social Security), backed by an "actuarily (financially) sound" trust fund to be administered jointly by company and union. Got it.

Insurance—Had none; asked full company-paid hospital, surgical and life insurance coverage costing about 6 cents an hour; got half that, or 3 cents.

Wage inequities—Asked elimination of 9 cents differential between Detroit and Indiana (Kokomo, New Castle and Evansville) plants; got 3 cents, leaving 6-cent differential.

Other increases — Asked 5-10 cents more hourly for 67 job classifications; got 5 cents for 45 classifications.

Length of contract — Old one ended by strike; asked two-year pact; got five-year pension section and three-year wage and insurance clauses reopenable once after July 1, 1951, and once after July 1, 1952, by either side.

Vacation pay — Asked varied amounts depending on service; got $31.10 a year more for those with three to five years service. (It is customary in the auto industry to work and take preminum pay in lieu of vacations.

Dues—Had no checkoff; asked one; got one. (Company deducts dues from wages and delivers to union.)

Union shop: had none; asked one; didn't get it. (All employes would have been required to join before or soon after taking job.)

The union claimed it got "strengthened grievance procedure" and "improved seniority provisions," among other noneconomic demands.

The strike against Chrysler Corp. closed down all manufacture of Chrysler, De Soto, Dodge and Plymouth cars and trucks.

It was the second longest and costliest in automotive industry history, exceeded only by a 113-day General Motors strike in 1945-46 that cost an estimated $1,457,000,000.

At the Chrysler bargaining table the company won out against a union demand that it contribute a certain cents-per-hour amount to a pension trust fund. Before the strike the company offered $100 pensions (including Social Security), but it refused to establish a trust fund on the grounds its "good faith and credit" were guarantees enough. The union wanted 6 cents hourly per worker paid into a jointly administered trust fund.

The difference on pensions was the major dispute causing the walkout.

The plan finally adopted is almost identical with the one which went into effect last fall at the Ford Motor Co. The UAW, now is negotiating with General Motors, largest of the industry's big three, for a $125 monthly pensions (including Social Security).

First-Quarter Loss Of $1,782,790 Reported

Detroit, May 4 (Spl.).—The Chrysler Corp., ending a 100-day strike today, reported a loss of $1,782,790 for the first quarter this year, compared with a net profit of $18,707,951 in same 1949 period.

Net sales for the first three months were $190,702,414, against $401,245,547 a year ago.

A dividend of $1.50 a share was declared, payable June 12 to stock of record May 16. The company began paying $1.50 in the last quarter of 1949. Prior to that, it had paid $1.25 quarterly.

Bus Walkout Cripples Line In Southeast

Lexington, Ky., May 4 (AP).—A walkout crippled Southeastern Greyhound Lines bus service today following the suspension of 27 bus drivers.

Guy A. Huguelet, president of the lines, said "probably two-thirds to three-fourths of our service has been affected by the wildcat strike."

An estimated 700 to 800 drivers from Cincinnati to Atlanta were believed absent from work. About 150 Lexington operators quit.

The drivers said they were protesting what they termed "Nazi-like methods" used in reported cash fare shortages involved 27 coach operators working out of Chattanooga, Tenn.

"There is no question of wages involved," Huguelet declared, terming the walkout, which started at Chattanooga, a clear-cut violation of the union contract, which doesn't expire until in December.

"We have not been able to contact union officials yet," the official said, but added that so far as company officials could learn, the walkout was not sanctioned by the union.

Some of the coach operators at Chattanooga were being investigated for possible discipline for breach of rules, the official said he understood, and were suspended during the investigation. No action had been taken nor any conclusions had been reached concerning the investigation.

Labor Dept. Changes Mind; Wire in Use Despite Strike

The Labor Department yesterday changed its official mind and decided it is okay to keep the United Press news teletype machine operating, even though 65 union telegraphers are on strike against the wire service for higher wages.

On Monday, Undersecretary of Labor Michael J. Galvin ordered the news printer turned off in deference t the picket lines set up by the AFL Commercial Telegraphers Union at all UP bureaus, including the one here.

On Wednesday, the House Labor Committee voted to inquire of the Labor Department why it had taken the action.

On Thursday, the Labor Department issued the following statement:

"The teletype was turned off by Undersecretary Galvin pending a review of the matter of the possibility that strike developments might interfere with the operations of the department. The department has completed its review of the matter and the teletype has been switched back on."

'False Economy' Bloc Hit on School Dearth

Philadelphia, May 4 (AP).—The president of the AFL's Women's Auxiliary asserted today that "politicians of the what-do-we-want-with-book-larnin' school" are blocking educational advances in the United States.

Mrs. Herman H. Lowe of Nashville, Tenn., president of the two-million-member American Federation of Women's Auxiliaries of Labor, said "certain groups of politicians" are acting "out of false economy."

"They are," she said as the auxiliary opened its fifth national convention, "attempting to decrease school revenues, to restrict educational facilities and to increase the size of classes."

"What we really need," she went on, "are even smaller classes, so children of all types may have more individual attention."

Mrs. Lowe described the situation as "a serious threat to our entire public school system." She added:

"The American home, and equally, our American schools, offer the most direct avenues we can use in combating both juvenile crime and communism, too."

She called on the auxiliary members to back a proposal for increased salaries for teachers, higher school revenues and Federal aid to the public school systems.

Teacher Supply Shown Far Below Demand

by The Associated Press

Results of the third annual study of teacher supply and demand announced yesterday showed that although colleges will graduate 22,460 elementary school teachers in June, the number needed next fall will be "a minimum of 100,000."

The report was prepared by Ray C. Maul, dean of the Emporia, Kans., State Teachers College. It was made public by Ralph McDonald, executive secretary of the National Commission on Teacher Education and Professional Standards.

McDonald said the school population will go up by almost a million students next year. And he warned:

"There is no possibility whatever of securing enough qualified teachers for the elementary schools of the Nation. They just do not exist."

Furthermore, McDonald said, the teachers we have are wearing out.

"They are getting older and wearier as their work is made heavier by the avalanche of increasing enrollment," he said.

"There never has been a time in our history,' he added, "when people have talked more about good schools and done less to get them."

Duquesne Head

Father Smith Transferred To Post Here

Pittsburgh, May 4 (AP).—The Holy Ghost Fathers today named the Very Rev. Francis P. Smith, president of Duquesne University, as coordinator of educational activities.

Father Smith assumes his new duties at the Holy Ghost Fathers provincial residence, 1615 Manchester lane nw., Washington, D. C., July 1.

Duquesne's board of directors selected the Rev. Vernon F. Gallagher to succeed Father Smith as president.

Father Smith, 43, is a native of Waterbury, Conn. He received an A.M. degree from Catholic University in 1938.

During Father Smith's four-year administration, Duquesne doubled its lecture hall facilities, built a new biology building, tripled its laboratory space and erected a student center.

In Washington, a spokesman for the Holy Ghost Fathers said that Father Smith would study all the other schools and houses of the organization and make recommendations to his superiors.

School Writing Award Goes To Hechinger

Fred Hechinger of the Bridgeport (Conn.) Herald, last night received first award for a 1949 series of newspaper articles on education in a contest sponsored by Education Writers Association.

Awards were presented at a dinner meeting of the First Education Writers Institute, sponsored by the association at the Statler Hotel.

Honorable mentions in the newspaper division went to Miss Elsie Carper, reporter for The Washington Post, and Theodore N. Cook, reporter for the Christian Science Monitor.

Hechinger, whose articles have appeared from time to time in The Washington Post, received an award from the association last year for a magazine article. Miss Carper's winning entry was a series of three articles on the teaching of reading, arithmetic and spelling in District schools.

A special citation went to the March of Time for a film, "The Fight for Better Schools," depicting how Arlington County, Va., residents met county problems of education.

Other awards were:

Outstanding article or series on education in a magazine, radio or television program, or wire service report—Jack Harris Pollack of This Week magazine, first award; outstanding work of interpreting education — Robert Moyer of the Baltimore Evening Sun, first award, with honorable ntions to Noel Vical and Jack arfel of the Cleveland Press, and Reef Waldrep of the Oak Ridger of Oak Ridger, Tenn.; outstanding editorial in a newspaper or magazine—Maj. Frederick Sullens of the Jackson, Miss., Daily News, first award, with honorable mention to Michael Bradshaw of the Toledo, Ohio, Blade.

2 D. C. Pools To Be Closed For Summer

Two indoor swimming pools operated by the District Recreation Department will be closed this summer while Central and Dunbar High Schools are being repaired.

Superintendent of Recreation Milo F. Christiansen yesterday said he had been informed by the Board of Education that indoor pools at both schools would be unavailable from the middle of June until September. Present night swimming schedules will continue until school close, he said.

This action will further curtail Recreation Department swimming facilities already cut by Recreation Board action last month. The board then decided to discontinue its free morning swimming classes at six Interior Department pools rather than operate them on a nonsegregated basis.

As a result, the only swimming facilities left to the Recreation Department this summer, said Christiansen, are the Rosedale and Georgetown pools. Both are for white persons.

The Interior Department has announced that its six pools will operate this summer on a nonsegregated basis, but legislation that would transfer their control to the District is now pending in Congress.

Part of Jap Fleet Arriving in U. S. In Form of Scrap

Baltimore, May 4 (AP).—Remains of the Japanese imperial fleet are passing through Baltimore this week—in six-ton chunks.

The Italian freighter Erminia Mazzella arrived with 9000 tons—200 railroad carloads—of scrap steel from Japanese ports.

In it are five-foot lengths of 16-inch naval guns, hunks of armor plate 18 inches thick, and all kinds of warship fittings. It will go by rail to Pittsburgh for melting down.

Dock workers watched the unloading a little wistfully. Back before Pearl Harbor, a steady stream of Japanese ships put in here to load scrap. Some of it has now made the round trip.

Celebrates Her 106th Birthday

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

"AUNT HANNAH" CARSON left her hospital bed in Charleroi, Pa., sampled her 106th birthday party cake at home, then returned to the hospital, where she has been under treatment for a stomach disorder for the past year. The frail little woman told friends at the party: "I believe the good Lord wanted me to live this long and that's why I did." She promised she would be back for number 107

Will Power 'Still the Best' Alcohol Cure

Detroit, May 4 (AP).—Will power still is the only cure for alcoholism. Antabuse, the newest drug, is useful, but no home remedy.

This was reported to the American Psychiatric Association today by 12 American and Canadian doctors. They said antabuse by itself is safe. But take a drink with antabuse in your system, and your face turns red, breath shortens, heart pounds and worry sweeps over you.

The obstacle to the wife's putting antabuse secretly in the coffee, the doctors said, is that there are some it might kill if they took even a bottle of beer afterwards.

People with bad hearts, high blood pressures, certain circulation troubles and bad livers are not allowed to take antabuse. Several doctors said it is necessary to have a psychiatrist direct the treatment. Not because of safety, but because success depends on the drinker's getting psychiatric help.

In San Francisco six doctors reported 82 patients, with 50 percent still dry after six months, 50 percent doing less drinking, except 12 who returned to habitual drunkenness. In Albany, N. Y., 150 were treated. Ninety-four improved greatly. In Montreal, where 125 have been treated, half who had failed to reform with other treatments succeeded with antabuse.

None of the doctors would predict whether even several years of staying dry with antabuse would be a permanent cure.

Case Load Up In Municipal Court in 1949

The Municipal Court caseload continued to rise during the last half of 1949, even though the court's cash income decreased slightly, Chief Judge George P. Barse declared yesterday.

In a report sent to the Attorney General and to the District Commissioners, the judge said that during the July-December, 1949, period, there were 73,614 new civil and criminal cases filed with the court. The corresponding period in 1948 had 70,064.

In contrast to this 5.07 percent increase in the number of cases, the amount of fines and forfeitures received by the court declined by 2.38 percent, from $705,346 to $688,548.

There has been a rising number of jury trial demands, the report states.

"But we have not been able to keep abreast of these progressively increasing demands for civil jury demands during the past year and a half, so that on December 31, 1949, there remained on hand 1076 undisposed-of civil jury cases," Judge Barse said.

Gondoliers' Strike Ends

Venice, Italy, May 4 (U.P.).—Five hundred Venetian gondoliers today called off a 48-hour strike after the Municipal Council granted their demand to slow down motorboats on the Grand Canal and lagoon.

Long-Range Program of Smog Control Needed, Says Davidson

By The Associated Press

Assistant Interim Secretary C. Girard Davidson last night called upon engineers attending a Federally-sponsored smog conference to "point the way for the many groups cooperating voluntarily who are ready to embark on a long-range program of air pollution control."

Davidson suggested "that the conference, before concluding late today, advise the Government whether the major problems involve public indifference, ignorance of the dangers or of the method of control.

"Does the structure of local government inhibit further progress?" Davidson asked.

"Should our zoning laws be changed? Is the tax structure making it difficult for industry to pay the costs of control?"

Davidson called the free interchange of information at the meeting as being in the best scientific tradition.

"All of us are determined that our democracies will continue to provide the political and intellectual climate that encourages the free exchange of knowledge," Davidson said.

He added that modern restrictions on the "age-old internationalism in the search for truth has made scientists all the more wary of security regulations where they are not required."

Dr. James N. Dunning, Harvard University School of Dental Medicine, Boston, said today that dentists can be valuable scouts for physicians in detecting diseases caused by exposure to industrial air contaminants.

Dunning said a dentist can easily note during periodical dental examinations the harmful effects from exposure to industrial dusts, gases and other hazards.

Dr. Fred W. Wittich, American College of Allergists, Minneapolis, said many commonly used insecticides are irritating to the respiratory system and may cause asthma and other allergies.

He said the spraying of insecticides from airplanes on apple orchards near Wenatchee, Wash., had aggravated asthmatic conditions and in some cases even brought on asthmatic attacks. Harmless insecticides are badly needed, he said.

Dr. Harold F. Dorn, National Cancer Institute, Bethesda, Md., said there often may be much more ill health in areas of air pollution than among persons in dstricts with cleaner air, without the situation attracting any particular attention.

"It is only when the more sudden outbreak of morbidity occurs—as at Donora, Pa.—in 1948—that attention is drawn to the possible connection of ill health and air pollution," Dorn said.

Mrs. Mesta to Get Federation of Clubs' Citation

Mrs. Perle Mesta, U. S. Minister to Luxembourg, will receive the Capital District Federation of Cosmopolitan Clubs' citation as "woman of the year" as one of the highlights of the two-day twentieth annual convention starting today at the Mayflower Hotel.

The award will be made at a special luncheon Saturday at the Congressional Country Club given by the wives of the delegates. Mrs. Truman will receive the wives prior to the presentation.

Fred J. Rice, Washington attorney, is retiring governor of the federation. More than 200 delegates from Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania and the District are expected.

Doctors Elect Costenbader As 1951 Chief

The Medical Society of the District of Columbia has chosen Dr. Frank D. Costenbader, president of the Medical Service of the District, as its president-elect.

An ophthamologist and assistant clincial professor of ophthamology at George Washington University Medical School, Dr. Costenbader will take office July 1, 1951.

Dr. William M. Ballinger takes office as president in July, along with these officers elected at the society's annual business meeting Wednesday night.

Dr. S. Ray Jacobs, first vice president; Dr. Helen Gladys Kain, second vice president; Dr. Walter Freeman, the society's current president, board member for four-year term; Dr. Herbert Ramsey, delegate to the American Medical Association, and Dr. Victor R. Alfaro, alternate delegate.

Dr. Costenbader, by his election as president-elect, becomes a member of the society's executive board.

The society voted that Group Health Association, lay-sponsored prepayment medical care plan, meets the 20 principles for such plans set up as criteria for recognition by the American Medical Association.

USPHS Plans Full Study of Cancer Test

The National Cancer Institute at Bethesda, Md., has completed plans to try out the recently reported Penn blood test for cancer, it was announced yesterday.

The test, developed by Dr. H. S. Penn and his associates at the University of California, has been described as a simple and accurate way of telling if a person has cancer.

Dr. Leonard A. Scheele, surgeon general of the United States Public Health Service, said it is "the most promising of the general tests for cancer so far reported."

Based on discovery of a particle-forming substance in the blood of cancerous patients, the Penn test consists of using an extract of that substance to mix with blood serum taken from the person to be tested. The serum is said to form particles in suspension if the tested person has cancer, but remains cloudy if the test subject is cancer-free.

According to the California Investigators' report of tests on some 4500 persons, the Penn test gave negative results for 99.5 percent of normal persons, and positive for 98.6 percent of those with known cancers.

Dr. John R. Heller, director of the NCI, said last night that the institute is sponsoring an independent tryout of the test under Dr. Stuart W. Lippincott, in Seattle, Wash.

Organization Of 29th Division Is Now Completed

The twenty-ninth Infantry Division of Maryland, West Virginia and Virginia has completed organization with Federal recognition of the last two units of the 116th Infantry Regiment, the National Guard said yesterday.

The last two components of the division's 110 units to be recognized were Company E, Charlottesville, Va., and Tank Company, Big Stone Gap, Va.

Organization of the Twenty-ninth Infantry Division, under Maj. Gen. William H. Sands of Norfolk, brings to 25 the number of National Guard divisions completely organized.

The Twenty-ninth Infantry was first grouped in 1917. It was in the D-Day invasion at Omaha Beach, underwent the Battle of the Hedgerows, and was in the mop-ups of the Ruhr area and the Klotze Forest.

U. S. Chamber Asks Congress To Shun ITO

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The United States Chamber of Commerce yesterday urged Congress to reject a bill permitting the United States to become a member of the International Trade Organization.

Basically the U. S. trade group objected to the ITO's Havana charter because it reflects too much acceptance of over-all economic planning by governments, a chamber spokesman said.

The chamber's objections were presented in testimony by Earl O. Shreve, former president of the national association, before the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

Last week Secretary of State Dean Acheson appeared before the House committee asking aproval of American membership in ITO. The ITO has been a controversial issue since March, 1948, when delegates of 54 nations at Havana agreed to set up a new United Nations agency in the field of world trade.

The chamber went on record as believing in the value of an international trade organization but urged that the Havana agreement be renegotiated.

Main criticisms of the Havana charter were:

1. The exceptions and escapes are so numerous as to subordinate and obscure the general objectives of nondiscriminatory multilateral trade. Although ostensibly intended as a medium for the elimination of quantitative restrictions, preferential agreements and discriminatory trade practices, these exceptions may be merely a device for giving sanction to their continuance.

2. There was a failure to eliminate or substantially mitigate the discriminatory system of preferential tariffs. On the contrary, opportunity has been provided for nations to establish new preferences.

3. From the United States standpoint there is grave danger in concessions in the charter to the philosophy of state planning, control and trading. We are especially concerned by the implications of the provisions for intergovernmental commodity agreements.

4. Foreign investment provisions of the charter fail to provide positive incentive to a flow of American capital to underdeveloped nations.

5. The United States is at a disadvantage in having only one vote. Particularly is this true in the light of the number of charter provisions ambiguously drafted and therefore subject to further interpretation by the organization.

Mrs. Allen C. G. Mitchell, national director of the League of Women Voters, appeared on behalf of that organization to urge United States membership in ITO.

"I appear before you," she said, "not as an economic expert, but as a representative of a group of women citizens who support the ITO as a necessary step in building the security and prosperity of the United States."

Mrs. Mitchell said the league felt that a "concerted attack on the obstacles to world trade" is essential, and that the ITO will provide machinery for making such an attack.

Guthrie, Prize-Winning Novelist, Visits D. C., but Leaves His Pulitzer Check Home

Novelist Guthrie (right) and Reporter Grove trace Platte River course

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

A. B. ("Bud") Guthrie, jr., whose novel, "The Way West," was awarded the Pulitzer prize for fiction Monday, arrived in Washington yesterday — without the prize check.

"I left it home in Lexington wtih my wife," Guthire said with a grin. "No I haven't spent it."

Guthrie and Bernard De Voto of Cambridge, Mass., whose "Across the Wide Missouri last year won the Pulitzer award for the most distinguished book of American history, will leave Bolling Air Base this morning for a three-week tour of United States Army Engineers' flood control projects from the headwaters of the Missouri River in Montana to St. Louis.

To Accompany Pair

They will be accompanied part of the way by Commander William J. Lederer, United States Navy, chief of the book and magazine branch, National Defense Department's public relations division, and author of "All The Ship's At Sea."

Guthrie, whose personality is more quiet than the bright burnt-orange sport shirt he was wearing, said the first news he had of the award was when he called the Lexington (Ky.) Leader, of which he was formerly executive editor, to verify some information for an article that he was writing.

"The boy who answered the phone said, 'Congratulations.'

"I didn't receive the official notification until 20 or 30 minutes later," Guthrie said.

Guthrie said the first thing his daughter, Helen, wanted to know was how much he was going to get. His son, Bertram, feigned indifference to the whole thing—but carefully kept a list of the names of all who sent their congratulations.

Recognition Important

The Pulitzer award carries a $500 stipend. "It isn't the money," Guthrie said, "for a writer it is the recognition and the increase in the advance sale of his new books."

Guthrie, who is working on a book about the Platte River, a tributary of the Missouri, was more concerned about his future than about the prize.

The novelist, 49 years old, said "the saddest thing in the world of letters is the man who gets old and keeps on writing, and doing increasingly poor work, but is able to get a publisher because of his past successes.

"But if I can do two more books, and do good work, I will settle for that. I would like to finish the panel on the West."

"The Big Sky" and "The Way West" are the first two books in the "panel."

U.S. Newsmen Told of World War Plans

Taipej, Formosa, May 4 (AP).—The Chinese Nationalists told a party of visiting American newsmen today that Russia and the Chinese Communists were making joint preparations for world war.

The 19 newsmen, who arrived yesterday for a conducted tour of this Nationalist center, heard these charges at a conference given by Gen. Chou Chi-Jou, chief of the joint general staff.

The Nationalists made such assertions as these:

That 100 Communist divisions were being "Sovietized" in organization and equipment; that Russia had promised the Reds 600 warplanes and so far had sent 277 to the Shanghai area; that a Russian submarine division was based at Tsingtao and Russian submarines had been seen near Shanghai, Formosa and Hainan.

That the Russians had given the Reds 34 warships, totaling 37,000 tons, which they got as Japanese war reparations; that 23,000 Soviet military advisers and technicians now were in China; that the Russians have been training Chinese airmen in Siberia, Manchuria and North Korea ever since Japan's surrender and that Russians were supervising airfield construction throughout China.

50 Millions More Asked by Nationalists

Taipel, Formosa, May 4 (U.P.).—The Chinese Nationalist government has asked the United States for another 50 million dollars in aid, of which 30 million dollars would be used for currency stabilization, Finance Minister C. K. Yen said today. The request was made last month, but no answer has been received, Yen said.

Israel Chief Recovering

Tel Aviv, Israel, May 4 (AP).—President Chaim Weizmann was reported tonight to be recovering satisfactorily from a cold. His office emphasized his condition is not serious.

The Gallup Poll

War Threat Held No. 1 Problem

By George Gallup

Director American Institute of Public Opinion

Princeton, N. J., May 4.—What President Truman in his forthcoming swing across the Nation has to say about world problems and the outlook for peace is likely to be scanned with much more than usual interest by political observers and voters alike.

The threat of war is considered by American voters the most important problem facing the Nation today.

This issue is named by nearly three times as many persons in a cross-section survey by the Institute as is the next most important problem in the public mind—the high cost of living and other economic difficulties.

Unemployment ranks next. A survey previously reported showed this problem rating as the most pressing local problem in the minds of voters in four sections of the country.

It is almost as if time had turned back and we were again in the world of 1939. The worries of the general public today closely parallel those of 1939, on the eve of the Second World War.

At that time the Institute also found that war or the threat of war was the chief public worry, along with unemployment and strikes. In those days a "cold war" against the western democracies was being waged by Hitler, instead of by the Russians.

Today's survey covered a representative cross-section of the voting population and each person interviewed was asked:

"What do you think is the MOST IMPORTANT problem facing the entire country today?"

The eight problems mentioned most frequently are:

War, threat of war	40%
Economic problems—living costs, inflation, taxes	15
Unemployment	10
Communism	8
Atomic bomb control	6
Strikes and labor troubles	4
Corruption in government	3
Housing	3

The proportion of people singling out war as the chief worry is the highest (40 percent) at any time since the end of World War II five years ago.

Other issues which were mentioned by 2 percent or fewer included: threats to our form of government, race problems, farm problems, public health and crime.

Past experience has shown that this type of survey is a sensitive reflection of public moods and worries in relation to events. For example, the last survey of this kind was conducted in November, 1949, and it found that strikes and labor troubles were named the chief issue facing the country. That was during the coal strike.

Today's study was conducted during a time of increasing tension between the United States and Russia, with the Soviets stepping up their "cold war" anti-American drives all over the world.

A crisis in Berlin is expected later this month when a rally of young Communists is scheduled to take place. The United States has served notice that it will repel, with armed force if necessary, any attempt of the Communist marchers to penetrate the Western or Allied section of Berlin.

Coupled with the public worry over war is a widespread desire for increasing the national defense establishment.

A survey reported by the institute last week showed that 63 per cent of voters favor an increase in the spending program for defense, even though the general mood of the public is for substantial decreases in Government spending in other major fields.

55 Percent of Workers Satisfied With Jobs

Princeton, N. J., May 4.—Evidence of the amount of satisfaction which people in various lines of work get out of their jobs is brought to light in a Nation-wide survey just completed by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

In this survey persons in various types of occupations were asked whether they would go into the same line of work if they were to begin all over again. The results will be of particular interest to young people who will be graduating from high schools and colleges throughout the country next month.

It shows that persons who go into business or take up a profession or become farmers generally get more satisfaction out of their work than those in other occupations.

A large majority of business and professional people and farmers said they would take up the same line of work again. A much smaller majority of people in white-collar jobs said this.

To find out about job satisfaction, interviewers for the American Institute of Public Opinion put a series of questions to a cross-section of voters.

After asking each person whether he is employed in a full-time job, the survey interviewers put this question to everyone who is employed:

"If you were to begin all over again, would you go into the same line of work, or not?"

Here is the total vote:

Yes, would	55%
No, would not	35
Undecided	10
	100%

Here is the way the vote went according to type of present occupation:

	Would	Would not	Undecided
Prof. & Bus.	70%	25%	5%
Farmers	70	22	8
White-Collar	55	34	11
Manual W'krs	46	43	11

One reason why business and professional people and farmers like their work may be that they generally are more "their own boss" than either white-collar workers or manual workers.

Justice Douglas to Be Post Luncheon Speaker

Douglas

Justice William O. Douglas, of the United States Supreme Court, author of "Of Men and Mountains," will speak at The Washington Post Book and Author Luncheon in the Hotel Statler Thursday, May 11

Douglas's love of the mountains came early in childhood. A victim of infantile paralysis, he started hiking through the sage-covered foothills around his home in Yakima, Wash., to build back the strength in his wasted legs.

The cure worked, and year by year he pushed his exploration further into the tangled, rugged mountains of the Pacific Northwest, finding sport and a more confident outlook on life.

Of his book, published several weeks ago by Harper's, Douglas has said, "Man can find deep solitude; and under conditions of grandeur that are startling he can come to know both himself and God."

Speaking with Justice Douglas at the 1 p. m. luncheon in the Statler's Presidential Room, will be Dr. Daniel A. Poling, author of "Faith Is Power—For You," Mrs. Louise Hall Tharp, author of "The Peabody Sisters of Salem," and John Foster Dulles, author of "War or Peace."

The luncheon will be the fourth and final one of the fifth season of The Washington Post Book and Author Luncheons.

Tickets are priced at $3, and are available at bookstores.

biting my hand," the statement read.

"Even with a towel as a restraint, it was almost impossible to keep him quiet and he talked and kept on struggling. The towel was around his neck just a minute or so, and wasn't held tight during all of that time."

Clemmer said that prisoners had told him Kirkpatrick used a towel in his struggle with Davis.

Kirkpatrick said he had nothing to add to the statement, "except I didn't put the towel around his head to hurt him, but to help him, to keep him from banging his head on the floor and to keep him from biting me."

The injection of a sedative loomed large in the investigations.

No Mention of Injection

The interne, E. C. Weppner, a third year medical student at Hospital made no mention of the injection in his written statement. He said that when he arrived at the cell block he found "the inmate very violent and in the process of being restrained. During the process of this restraint, the inmate collapsed and became very limp."

In their preliminary report Detective Sergeants Walter B. Vogelsang and Bernard D. Crooke reported Weppner had told them he thought Davis was "on the verge of DTs (delirium tremens)," but that "he started to give him an injection of sodium amytal," but that "he did not believe that any of the sodium amytal had been injected."

Police said "Dr. Martin L. Cannon, the jail doctor, stated that he had examined the syringe used by Interne Weppner and that it was a standard dose of sodium amytal in five cc's of water. He said that there was some blood in the syringe which indicated that the vein had been punctured but that in his opinion not more than one cc had been injected."

Chemical Tests Made

Dr. Murphy said that chemical tests were being made to determine how much of what had been injected into Davis. The results of the tests "ordinarily would be finished now but just aren't."

Murphy performed the original autopsy on Davis' body April 29 and in the preliminary death certificate found that death was due to acute congestive heart failure.

That diagnosis was made, he explained yesterday, "because that was the immediate cause of death and some cause of death must be given to release the body.

"However, congestive heart failure is caused itself by many things," he added, "and just what caused it in this case is what we are looking for. It's still a wide-open case. We don't know the cause of death. Tests are still to be done which might indicate whether strangulation, or for that matter almost anything else, caused death."

Not Due to Heart Disease

"The dead man had no history of heart disease, nor did any of the pathological tests show the degenerative processes involved in heart disease. He did not die of heart disease," Dr. Murphy said.

None of the investigating agencies have asked that burial of the body be withheld. It was shipped Tuesday to the Rodgers Funeral Home, Fayetteville, N. C., Davis' home. Funeral services are scheduled to be held there at 4 p.m., today.

Dr. Murphy said there is "no need" for bringing the body back to Washington for reexamination.

"We have all we need of all the body tissues, including the brain, the heart, the lungs, and the liver," he said.

FBI agents questioned at least six prisoners, Edward Davis, Clarence Baldwin, Wesley Settles, Thomas Logan, Nathaniel Anderson, and Leroy Hubbard, Davis' cellmate, who are alleged to have witnessed Davis' death. Anderson and Baldwin are members of an alleged four-man hold-up gang arrested here April 18. The others are unidentified.

FBI agents and police also questioned jail guard, Enoch A. Creel and Granville Fouche, who told police they were the guards who came to Kirkpatrick's assistance.

Fouche stated Davis "seemed to be in a violent rage." Creel said Davis "became very disturbed." Neither mentioned a towel. Creel said that Davis broke away from Kirkpatrick.

Two inmates also made statements for police, Hubbard and George A. Carroll, who was in an adjoining cell.

Carroll said Davis seemed to be in a "rough mood," "kind of dopey," but that the "guards were very nice to him."

Two Men Die In Falls, One Other Hurt

Two men were killed and one was injured as a result of falls in the District yesterday.

John T. Matthews, 49, of 809 Delaware ave. sw., an employe of the District department of sanitation, was killed when he fell from the top of a trash truck about 10:30 a. m.

Police said Mr. Matthews was attempting to lift a bag of trash onto the truck when he apparently lost his balance and landed head-first in an alley at the rear of the 700 block of Portland st. se.

He was pronounced dead at 10:50 a. m. by a Gallinger Hospital physician. Dr. Christopher J. Murphy, deputy District coroner, issued a certificate of accidental death.

Dr. Murphy withheld a certificate pending an investigation into the death of William E. Thomas, 61, found lying on the steps of his home at 6430 6th st. nw. about 1:15 a. m.

Mr. Thomas was pronounced dead on arrival at Gallinger Hospital.

Injured in a fall was Dan Diorio, 60, of 719 1st st. nw.

He suffered possible fractures of the jaw and spine when he toppled 8 feet from a scaffold while laying bricks at a building project in the 1300 block of Savannah st. se.

Diorio was detained at Casualty Hospital.

Ex-Financier Takes Life at Md. Estate

Chestertown, Md., May 4 (AP).—Col. Hiram Staunton Brown, retired New York financier and long prominent on the Eastern Shore, shot and killed himself today.

He was 67 and distraught by a nervous condition that had bothered him for a year.

Dr. A. C. Dick, resident surgeon at Kent-Queen Anne's Hospital here and Brown's personal physician, had been sleeping at the Brown home for some time because of his friend's illness.

About midnight, he said, Brown complained he couldn't sleep. The doctor gave him some sleeping tablets and himself went to bed, about 12:30 a. m.

About 2:45 a. m., the doctor said, a ringing telephone awakened him. It was a neighbor, Robert Atkinson. Atkinson said he had got a call from Brown and was disturbed by it.

Dr. Dick hung up the telephone and heard a noise. He went to investigate and found Brown's body on the pantry floor. He had been shot through the left chest. Nearby was the old .45 automatic he had carried in World War I.

Mrs. Brown was sleeping at the time.

Dr. Frank W. Smith, Kent County medical examiner, issued a certificate of suicide.

Brown was known in Maryland as the long-time chairman of the board of visitors at Washington College. He took the job in 1922 and still holds it. He graduated from the college, with its highest honors, as a lad of 18 in 1900. He was born and reared in the county.

He started his career as an office boy on the old New York Herald and later worked on the old Washington Times. Then he got interested in finance.

For many years he was associated with two large investment banking houses in New York, specializing in utility securities.

In 1924 he became president of the United States Leather Co. In 1929 he shifted to the presidency of Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corp. and Radio Pictures.

In 1933 he returned to Kent County and took over Godlington Manor, the 600-acre show-place estate in the family for many years. He maintained another residence at Rye, N. Y.

Brown did not stay much in retirement. He became a Washington "dollar-a-year" man in the National Recovery Administration early in the Roosevelt years, although a Republican.

Survivors include the widow and a son, Hiram Staunton Brown, jr., who is in motion picture work in Hollywood. There also are two young grandchildren and a brother and sister: Burchinal Brown of New York and Mrs. Elizabeth Childs of Brooklyn.

Morals Conviction Upheld by Court

By a two-to-one vote, the Municipal Court of Appeals yesterday upheld the conviction of Edward F. Kelly, 41, United States Public Health Service employe fined $75 on a morals charge.

The majority said that Municipal Court Judge Thomas D. Quinn committed no "prejudicial error" when he refused to order the Police Department to bring the court records which would would have proved whether or not the undercoverman in the case lied on the witness stand.

Kelly was sentenced on December 2 after he was convicted of inviting the undercoverman, Pvt. Frank N. Manthos, to accompany him for a lewd or immoral purpose. The Government's case depended almost entirely on the testimony of Manthos who at the time of the alleged offense was a plainclothesman assigned to investigate perversion in downtown Washington areas.

On cross-examination, the defense lawyer, Attorney James J. Laughlin, asked Manthos whether or not the prosecutor in another case had charged him with perjury and had recommended disciplinary action resulting in Manthos' demotion.

Manthos denied either the charge or recommendation for demotion was ever made. The lawyer then sought a subpena to have Manthos' personnel record brought into court. Judge Quinn refused the request.

The Appeals Court opinion, written by Judge Andrew M. Hood with Chief Judge Nathan Cayton concurring, said it would have been "better policy" to have the records brought in and then decide whether they were admissible in evidence.

However, since the records related to a "collateral matter" and not to the direct issue in the case, the trial judge's action was deemed not reversible under Municipal Court practice.

In a sharp dissent, Judge Brice Clagett said that the file should have been produced.

"In any event, I believe the practice of passing in advance on evidence sought by a subpena is bad, is antiquated, and should no longer be recognized," Judge Clagett said.

'Crazy Jealous'

Suitor Kills Girl on Porch Kissing Rival

Columbiana, Ala., May 4 (U.P.)—A "crazy jealous" suitor, who could not match his rival's car, was charged today with the murder of his 15-year-old junior high school sweetheart.

Fred Wells, 20, freely admitted he fired the shots that killed Bobbie Jean Brewer and wounded Roderick (Buck) Salser, 23-year-old ironworker.

Wells, said Bobbie Jean "promised to marry me about a month ago," told how he fired from the street when he saw the pair "kissing goodnight on Bobbie Jean's doorstep."

The young slayer surrendered shortly after shooting the couple with a .22-caliber rifle.

"As best as I can figured it out, Wells was just plain crazy jealous," the sheriff said.

Wells said he always "had to walk more than a mile just to see Bobbie Jean." He added bitterly that "Buck tried to take her away from me by sporting a big, new car."

Salser, shot in the chest, is expected to live.

Wells said he "made up my mind to kill Buck when I saw them ride by going to Birmingham earlier in the night." At the time he said he and four companions were "drinking some beer." He said he left, took the rifle and walked to the Brewer home.

"When I passed, I saw them on the porch. They were kissing, so I shot. I only intended to shoot Buck, but I saw Bobbie Jean fall. I knew I hadn't gotten Buck, so I shot again."

"I'm sure Bobbie Jean was in love with me, but Buck and his car just made me mad."

Tilley Alien Case Matter For Congress

It is up to Congress to decide whether 27-year-old Jonilde Bruno may remain in the United States.

The Italian woman says Col. Ralph C. Tilley, 54, married her in Italy while he was serving in that country, and that he is the father of her 18-month-old son.

Colonel Tilley was convicted of bigamy by a court-martial at Fort Myer Wednesday. Immigration officials said yesterday that Miss Bruno's status as a war bride (she entered on such a visa) was destroyed by the court action.

However, she already has indicated her desire to remain in the United States, because of the American citizenship of her son. Immigration authorities said Miss Bruno will apply for residence here on the grounds that it would be a hardship to her son were she deported.

Her case will be presented to the immigration authorities who, with Justice Department officials, will investigate it and make recommendations to the Judiciary Committees of both houses of Congress.

Those bodies may permit Miss Bruno to remain by a joint resolution. Meanwhile immigration officials said yesterday, they contemplate no action against Miss Bruno pending congressional decision.

Tilley was sentenced to two years at hard labor and the six-officer court also directed that he be discharged from the Army and forfeit all pay rights. The verdict must be reviewed by Maj. Gen. Thomas W. Herren, commanding general of the Military District of Washington and by higher Army authorities.

7 Children Killed In School Bus Crash

Centerville, Tex., May 4 (U.P.)—Seven school children were killed and three others injured today when a converted "school bus" collided with a trailer-truck loaded with sheet steel.

The seven apparently were killed instantly when the impact threw them out of their "bus"—a canopied pickup-type truck—and under the wheels of the heavily laden trailer.

They were dragged off the highway into a plowed field where the truck finally stopped.

Prichard Appeals To Supreme Court In Ballot Box Case

E. F. Prichard, jr., yesterday appealed to the Supreme Court to review his conviction on a charge of ballot box stuffing in Kentucky.

Prichard was a one-time favorite of President Franklin D. Roosevelt. He held high positions here during the Roosevelt Administration. For a time he was counsel for the Democratic National Committee. He was law clerk to Justice Frankfurter for a year, beginning June 11, 1939.

Prichard was convicted in United States District Court in Lexington and got a two-year prison term. He was charged with conspiring to forge ballots in the 1948 presidential election in Bourbon County, Ky.

He appealed to the Supreme Court after the United States Circuit Court in Cincinnati affirmed the conviction.

Police Still Probing Ferranto Baby Death

Alexandria police yesterday continued their investigation into the death of 2½-year-old Donald Dee Ferranto despite the fact that the boy's stepfather already has been charged with the murder.

Detectives continues to question the stepfather, John C. Ferranto, who was formally bound over to the grand jury late Wednesday. But they also questioned Mrs. Emma W. Jenkins, a housekeeper, whose confused statements during the preliminary hearing led to an order by Judge James R. Duncan that she be held without bail for investigation.

Inspector Russell A. Hawes, chief of detectives, said the investigation yesterday shed no further light on the death of the child April 23 as the result of "severe injuries" the night before. But, Hawes said, "we still have an open mind on this case" despite the murder charge against Ferranto.

The defendant, a 20-year-old electrician, voluntarily underwent a lie detector test yesterday, but police declined to comment on the result. Inspector Hawes described the test as "a further effort to get to the bottom of the case."

Hawes said Mrs. Jenkins, under intensive grilling, adhered to the testimony she gave during the preliminary hearing. She said she was at the Ferranto home the night the baby suffered fatal injuries, but had no knowledge of how they were inflicted.

Mrs. Jenkins' "confusion" on the witness stand, was attributed by her to the rapidity of questions fired at her, forgetfulness and "uneasiness" over her role in the case, Hawes said.

Professor, Student Drop Accusations

An Arlington County policeman and a Washington-Lee High School student shook hands yesterday and agreed to forget the playground disturbance that ended in arrest of the youth and an assault charge against the policeman.

Charges of disorderly conduct and resisting arrest against the youth, Herbert C. Bohrer, 18, of 866 N. Frederick st., Arlington, were withdrawn, according to Assistant Commonwealth's Attorney Edward O. Poole.

At the same time an assault charge against the policeman, Pvt. William R. Horner, was withdrawn by the boy, who originally said the officer struck him during the arrest.

The dispute stemmed from an argument at a county-operated playground at Wilson blvd. and N. Harrison st. on April 25.

Boy, 10, Dies After Two Falls

Ten-year-old Glenn Warren Shotwell died in Prince Georges General Hospital Wednesday night. He was hurt in two falls on Monday.

Dr. John T. Maloney, Prince Georges County medical examiner, said the boy suffered a hemorrhage in his head. He issued a certificate of accidental death.

The first fall occurred, Dr. Maloney said his investigation showed, on Monday afternoon when Glenn fell from a tree near his Carmody Hills (Md.) home and hit his head on a stone. Going home afterward, the boy cut his foot on a piece of glass.

Shortly before midnight, Glenn again fell, this time from an upper bunk while asleep. His foot was bleeding again when his mother found him, Maloney said.

The boy was taken to the hospital Tuesday morning after the family physician, Dr. W. Sult Ritchie, was called in. After a head operation, he showed signs of improvement, but died at 7:10 p. m. Wednesday.

In addition to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Claude O. Shotwell, of 7422 C st., Carmody Hills, Glenn is survived by two sisters, Patricia Anne and Helen, and a brother, William.

Funeral services will be held Saturday at 10 a. m. at Chambers funeral home, 517 11th st. se. Burial will be in Fairfax Cemetery.

Grand Jury Investigates Frank Erickson

New York, May 4 (NYHT).—A New York County grand jury investigation of Frank Erickson "and associates" began today as one of his vital "dummies" was held in $100,000 bail as a material witness.

District Attorney Frank S. Hogan, who has been conducting a quiet inquiry into activities of the big-time lay-off bookmaker for over a year and who raided Erickson's Park ave. office Monday, has assigned four key assistants to the grand jury investigation, which may take in gambling in general.

One of the four, Joseph M. Gasarch, also Hogan's chief accountant, was a witness today. Heavy horse bettors known to hvae played with Erickson are scheduled to be questioned tomorrow.

Harry Richards, 62-year-old grandfather and convicted bookmaker, was described in General Sessions by Alfred J. Scotti, assistant district attorney in charge of the rackets bureau, as a dummy" for Erickson. Scotti told Judge John A. Mullen that Richards, a thin, gray-haired man who claimed he received only $70 a week from Erickson, had last April 25 a $114,051.43 account in the Pennsylvania Exchange Bank, under the name of "H. Richards."

Says It's Erickson's Money

That money Scotti said, was Erickson's money and the "H. Richards" found on some check stubs in Erickson's office referred to the material witness, who was picked up Wednesday night in the Times Square area. The prosecutor said Richards had been associated with Erickson for many years and had several safe deposit boxes for Erickson in the name of Richards.

Judge Mullen was also told that Erickson has two other accounts at the Pensylvania Exchange Bank in his own name, but they were considerably less than the "H. Richards" one. Vincent G. O'Connor, assistant district attorney who has been investigating Erickson for more than a year, indicated that Richards was so vital to the inquiry that "underworld figures connected with Erickson" would be happy to see Richards disappear.

His investigation has shown, O'Connor said, that Erickson was connected with "leading racketeers in Florida, and in other parts of the country. In Florida, he was associated with two of the top racketeers in America—two of the most notorious, infamous characters operating the best-known plush gambling house in that State."

"Unique in History of Gambling"

"This man," O'Conor said of Erickson, admittedly operating book in the forty-eight States, "taxes the imagination. He is unique in the history of gambling. He iis the pyramind in the gambling setup. This is not just an ordinary gambling case. Erickson's bookmaking business is empirical, Nationwide. Richards can give vital linking testimony."

Fred Kaplin, Richard's lawyer, described his client as "a poor wretch" who received $70 a week from Erickson and had no way of raising $100,000 bail. Judge Mullen cut in to say "You must take into consideration the reputation of Erickson's wealth" and that "I take it Erickson will bail him out." The judge also said, "If the district attorney is able to prosecute Erickson, he (Richards) will be an important witness."

Then, on formal application made by James J. Fitzpatrick, assistant district attorney, Judge Mullen fixed bail of $100,000 for Richards, who was removed to the Tombs. The judge, meanwhile, is studying the impounded load of documents taken from Erickson's office Monday. He will determine May 17 whether they are concerned with the commission of crimes on the part of Erickson, who testified before a Senate Subcommittee last Friday that he nets $100,000 a year.

Two at Md. U. Held for Jury On Rape Count

Two expelled University of Maryland physical education students were held for grand jury section yesterday in Hyattsville Police Court for attempted rape of a 12-year-old Washington girl.

The defendants, George T. Glorius, 24, of 2705 Nicholson st., Hyattsville, and Harold E. Skipper, 25, of 2357 Rhode Island ave. ne., did not tes testify in their own behalf. The wives of both were in the court room.

Judge Alan Bowie refused to set bond for the defendants and remanded them to jail.

They were expelled Monday for "conduct unbecoming to a student of Maryland University." Dean of Men Geary Eppley stated yesterday.

The only testimony given in court was that of the alleged victim and her 12-year-old girl friend.

The slight, pigtailed girl testified the alleged attempts took place April 28 in a cabin near Berwyn. She said she was taken there after her companion was returned home.

The charges were filed by Prince Georges County police. District police stopped the defendants' car as the result of a report by the girl's mother that she was missing from home.

REFUSE TO TELL ALL—Tano Lococo (left) and Eddie (Spitz) Osadchey, both associates of Kansas City's murdered gangster, Charles Gargotta, appeared before the Senate Commerce Subcommittee with their Washington attorney, Myron Erhlich (center) yesterday and refused to say whether their race news distributing company in Kansas City serves bookie establishments. Their service went out of business 24 hours before they made their appearance here. "No customers" was the reason given officials have denied that their firm has any connection with General News.

The testimony also brought out that Standard formerly received its track information from the Midwest News Service in Chicago. The Western Union report said that Midwest is a subdistributor with a direct wire connection to Continental. However, Continentals general manager, Thomas Kelly, has denied that his firm serves Midwest.

Continental has been described by witnesses as the major supplier of race news used by bookies. The firm's official have called attacks on it "slanderous and libelous" and defended its operations as legitimate.

A Kansas City grand jury has declared that Standard brings Continental's reports into that city, furnishing them to bookies doing $8,500,000 a year business. Continental denied it has any clients in Kansas City.

McFarland told Lococo and Osadchey that "by implication" the committee regarded them as in the gambling business.

Osadchey testified that they were out of the racing news business as of Wednesday.

He acknowledged that he doesn't know whether this is a permanent shutdown.

He wouldn't name his customers, but he said they pay $50 to $100 a week for racing information. He said they telephone Standard to get the information.

The cost of this information to Standard is $125 a week, plus a 10 percent wire tax, paid to General News.

But Osadchey also related that another expense was $200 a week salary and a 15 percent cut in the net profits to Simon Partnoy to manage Standard News. He testified that the Standard partnership was formed in 1946 to take over the business of the Harmony Publishing Co.

Attorney General J. E. Taylor of Missouri told the inquiry Wednesday that Partnoy controlled Harmony until he was "muscled" out of it.

McFarland asked Osadchey if force had been used to get Partnoy to give up his business, which the witness denied.

The firm continued as Harmony Publishing Co. until January 3, 1949, questioning brought out.

Then it began to call itself Standard News Service, and Osadchey agreed the reason was an injunction that had been obtained against Harmony.

Osadchey and Lococo each testified they had seen Gargotta and political leader Charles Binaggio from one to four days before they were shot down in a Democratic headquarters. Each refused to say whether they had engaged in gambling with the slain pair.

Israeli Presented Four Gifts of Books

Four gifts of books, totaling 5000 volumes, were presented to Israeli institutions at ceremonies in the Library of Congress last night.

Presentation of the books to the Jewish National and Hebrew Library in Jerusalem and to the newly founded Berl Katzenelson Institute in Kfar-Saba was sponsored by the library and The American Friends of the Hebrew University.

The presentation marks perhaps the largest single shipment of books to Israel under such auspices.

Three of the gifts were previously announced. They are the Johann Jakob and Eugenia Hornliker Memorial Collection, the Prof. Nikodem Caro Science Library, and selected titles from the Library of Congress' collections.

The fourth gift was announced last night. It is a collection of recent medical journals, given by Dr. George Wehnes Calver, attending physician to the Congress of the United States.

Participating in the ceremonies were Librarian of Congress Luther H. Evans, Dr. Maurice Herzmark, president of the Washington Chapter, AFHU; Dr. Walter N. Ezekiel, president of the Washington chapter, American Technion Society; Dr. Lawrence Marwick, chief of the Library of Congress's Hebraic section, and the Ambassador of Israel, Dr. Eliahu Elath, who accepted the gift.

Dr. Elath in his speech of acceptance said, "Exactly a year ago we received a gift of 100 million dollars. That was a loan, and I have no doubt of its being repaid.

"These books represent the United States no less than the dollars," he said, "both are essential to Israel's development."

Falls Church School Budget Hearing Set

The Falls Church City Council last night set June 12 as the tentative date for a public hearing on the proposed $296,456 school budget.

The school board and City Council held a combined meeting at City Hall.

The budget as it now stands would entail a 25-cent increase in the combined general city-school board tax rate of $4.55 per $100 of assessed evaluation. It would provide for seven more teachers next year, and for the increase in the teachers' salary scale the school board already has approved.

The proposed budget also would permit the beginning of retirement of the $700,000 school construction bond issue voted last fall.

Prisoners' Rights

There are enough suspicious circumstances in the "heart failure" death of a Negro prisoner in the District Jail to warrant searching investigation. A guard at the jail, now placed on leave, has admitted putting a towel around the prisoner's neck during a scuffle. Whether or not this had anything to do with the death, it was a highly improper procedure and in itself is reason for investigation. The exact cause of the death must, of course, be determined medically. It is hard to see how a satisfactory answer can be obtained unless the prisoner's body is brought back to Washington for an autopsy. This had better be done quickly, because burial is set for this afternoon in North Carolina..

From all reports the prisoner, who had been jailed on a housebreaking charge, was violent, verging on the hysterical. Some measures to subdue him undoubtedly were necessary. The object of the investigation must be to find out just how extreme these measures were. It is fortunate that the investigation in this case has been joined by the FBI and the United States attorney, who should be able to piece together the truth from witnesses and prevent any cover-up. In this connection the District director of corrections, Mr. Donald Clemmer, is to be commended for the promptness and frankness with which he has sought to get the facts on the case.

Atom Bomb Strategy

A reasoned and convincing case against reliance on the atom bomb as the main element of military strategy is presented by 18 members of the Harvard and Massachusetts Institute of Technology faculties in their communication today on Page 29. Some of the arguments have been made before by this newspaper. The more American defense is built around strategic bombing as the principal striking force, and the more this strategy gains public acceptance, the more difficult it is to backtrack. In short, the danger lies in increasing dependence on what may be an illusion of strength.

Lay aside the moral arguments against atom bomb strategy. These are by no means insignificant; but the fact remains that it is war itself, rather than specific weapons of war, that is immoral. On purely practical grounds the objections to atomic bombing as our main military stock in trade boil down to these: First, as cited by the Harvard-MIT group, it is no deterrent to localized or limited aggression. It is scarcely an effective answer to guerilla tactics. Second, it would leave our allies such as Britain extremely vulnerable to retaliation, and by the same token it would mean that in the event they were overrun by Russia we would have to use atom bombs against our friends. Third, if the aftermath of stategic bombing in Germany is any index, wholesale atom bombing would make the reconstruction of an enemy country extremely difficult, if not impossible.

This is not to say that the atom bomb has no part in defense strategy. Tactical use of the bomb, to deny territory, to prevent massed river crossings and the like, has possibilities. Also, if an enemy began bombing American cities, it would be difficult to resist retaliation in kind. Strategic bombing of selected enemy industries has a place, though the number of targets on which atom—especially hydrogen—bombs could be used effectively and not wantonly is limited. The objection is to reliance on a strategy which, by its very nature would probably mean that in a showdown the United States would be trapped into striking the first blow without means to follow it up.

It is not hard to see whence strategic bombing doctrine derives some of its support. It is the one element of defense in which the United States is definitely superior to Russia. The fact that the United States cannot hope to match, say, Russian ground forces, is no reason to place undue faith in a gamble for a cheap victory. Manpower isn't everything. Defense, as General Collins pointed out the other day, is more a matter of industrial potential and technology than mere manpower. It requires, not equal numbers of men, but superior weapons and planning. Yet concentration on strategic bombing leads to neglect of other essentials, both military and psychological. The hard fact is, of course, that to build up other facets of defense would cost more money—for ground and sea forces, tactical aviation, guided missiles and the like. The extent that these are being neglected now in favor of a blitz theory measures the extent that real American defense is weakened.

American defense, however, is irretrievably linked with that of western Europe. If, in the interest of genuine security there should be more stress on nonatomic arms, then this has profound implications both in the division of labor and the over-all balance of forces under the Atlantic Pact. That is why it is so vitally important that the collective defense get under way and that it be approached boldly and realistically on both sides of the Atlantic.

Iranian Cloud

In sending Maj. Gen. James A. Van Fleet to represent the President at some ceremonial exercises in Tehran, Mr. Truman is recognizing a looming crisis in Iran, key to the Indian Ocean. Iran is reported to be in a state of near-collapse. Far from having helped him in control of affairs, the Shah's visit to America seems to have lessened his hold, and government itself is gasping for its existence. The reason is that the landowning aristocracy of Iran is becoming obstructionist. The powerful landowners got alarmed over the possibility that the Shah might try to introduce new ideas which would endanger their feudal privileges and might assert a new authority which would sweep away corruption. They are afraid of reform and authority no less than of communism. Perhaps this is the reason for the constant threat of a breakup—a breakup which would mean the establishment of the Russians in the northern province of Azerbaijan, and open up to them the territory further south along the Persian Gulf. The Russians are helped by the growing underground activity of the Tudeh, or People's Party, which is said to be Communist-led, and which led the separatist movement in Azerbaijan in 1947. Another development in their favor is the naming to the Premiership of the former governor of Azerbaijan, Ali Mansoor, who, if not a friend of the Russians, has a record as an appeaser.

All the talk of Communist influence and infiltration may or may not be true. But two things are certain. One is that the misery into which Iran has been plunged, as a result of a crop failure, unemployment, and inflation, constitutes the seed-bed of communism. Another sure thing is that arms and dollars won't help. Indeed, the former might bring on trouble, for this is a vital spot in the strategy of both Russia and the Western world. Iran could at any time provide the spark for a Russo-Western collision. This is known all over the East, and doubtless was an extra argument in the minds of the Pakistan and Indian Premiers that the time was overdue in the common security to start burying the Indo-Pakistan hatchet.

The popular and amiable Iranian Ambassador in Washington, Hussein Ala, whose loss the Capital deplores, is said to have come from the State Department emptyhanded when he applied for aid during his farewell call. Arms and dollars are, as we have said, of no service, either to Iran or to America. Nor are big-scale development schemes. Iran is embarked on a five-year plan for the modernization of the country, but the enterprise is said to have been arrested by the downturn in economic conditions. Even so, this kind of aid in the circumstances of Iranian life is of dubious value. What Iran needs is not modernity, but grassroots resuscitation. For instance, with inflation rampant, the speculators and hoarders are entrenched, and the people are bound to become more and more impoverished.

In these circumstances a new idea may be offered for consideration. Iran eats wheat and rice, and if this country could send a supply of both cereals to Tehran, to be fed out to the market by an agency appointed by the U. N. Food and Agriculture Organization, then the speculator and the hoarder may be circumvented, and the present vicious circle (inflation-hoarding—more inflation—more hoarding) might be turned into a virtuous circle. General Van Fleet is a military man, but his experience in Greece has taught him that the administrator rather than the soldier holds the answer to such problems as he will encounter in Iran, and, on the basis of actual experience with him, we have confidence in his appreciation of realities and in his judgment.

Not Good Enough

After many weeks of hearings the Senate Finance Committee is putting the finishing touches on its program for broadening old-age-insurance coverage and increasing insurance benefits. Senator George, chairman of the Finance Committee, has already outlined the main features of the bill, and he hopes the final measure can be reported to the Senate next week. Meantime, it is possible to compare the bill with the provisions of the revisionist bill passed by the House at the last session. In a subsequent editorial The Washington Post will discuss proposed increases in the scale of benefits, limiting the present discussion to recommendations for extension of coverage.

The Finance Committee has voted to extend coverage to 8.5 million persons—seven million on a compulsory basis, and 1.5 million employes of State and local governments on a voluntary basis. This plan is thus more disappointing than the provisions of the House bill which extends coverage to 11 million workers, including about four million State and local government employes insurable on a voluntary basis. But even the more liberal House bill leaves 14 million workers outside the system. Among the excluded in both versions are farm operators and farm laborers. Domestic servants, who are in special need of the protection afforded by social legislation, fare somewhat better in the Senate bill than in the House bill.

Since the administrative difficulties connected with the insurance of most excluded groups have been solved, there is no excuse for delaying extension of coverage to practically all the gainfully employed. Limited coverage, the Federal Security Agency points out, leads to serious difficulties, and the system cannot be fully effective until all occupational groups are included. For instance, if a worker shifts to uncovered employment, the benefits payable to him when he returns to covered employment are lowered. And if he is out of covered employment for a long period of time he may lose all his benefit rights.

The present system of limited coverage is also highly inequitable. Those who are not insured have to pay indirectly for the benefits of insured workers to the extent that payroll taxes are shifted to consumers in the form of higher prices. On the other hand, covered workers have to pay through general taxes to provide for needy workers who are not covered and are forced to depend on public assistance.

The strongest argument in favor of universal coverage is that it would provide benefits for millions of now unprotected workers under a contributory insurance system relating benefits to earnings. Benefits are paid as a matter of right, regardless of need, and the worker's dignity and independence are maintained. Of course, payments must be sufficiently high to provide for subsistence needs, if the old-age-insurance system is to free the aged from dependence on charity. At present levels benefits are grossly inadequate. But, given an adequate scale of payments and universal coverage, the number of old people dependent on public assistance and private charity would dwindle rapidly and Federal old-age-assistance grants to the States could be gradually reduced and eventually discontinued. So long as millions of workers are deprived of the benefits of the insurance system the relief load will be heavy, the States will continue to look to the Federal Government for help and it will be difficult, if not impossible, to suppress the abuses that have developed under the Federal grants-in-aid system.

Alabama Division

More significant than the renomination of Senator Lister Hill in Alabama is the victory scored by the so-called "loyal" Democrats in recapturing the State Democratic Executive Committee from the Dixiecrats. The victory of Mr. Hill, who on most issues has been among the more constructive influences in the Senate, was pretty much a foregone conclusion. Not so sure was the lead of the regular Democrats for Executive Committee seats. Even the run-offs will not affect the outcome in favor of the regulars.

What progress has been made must be viewed against the situation in the 1948 presidential election, when all of Alabama's electoral votes went to the States' Rights ticket headed by Gov. J. Strom Thurmond. Senator Hill, in appealing for a return to the Democratic fold, argued that anti-civil-rights Democrats could accomplish more there than in a separate party. The success of Southern legislators in blocking the more extreme civil rights measures gives a lot of support to his contention, and apparently Alabama voters thought so, too.

Whereas this aspect of the return to the Democratic Party is essentially negative, there are other ways in which it is of general benefit. Splinter parties, especially those founded on sectional interests, have the effect of tossing monkey wrenches into the gears of the two-party system. It has been observed that for this system to operate successfully, each party must be broad enough to bind together many facets of opinion. This feature is often responsible for the lack of clear-cut and meaningful platforms, and it often occasions intraparty debates. But precisely because legislation advanced under such a system must be subjected to the leavening of compromise, it is less likely to evoke the extremism that endangers democratic government.

Tourist Town

Once again the Greater National Capital Committee of the Board of Trade is seeking funds with which to promote Washington's virtues as a tourist and convention center. The common-sense self-interest in this project scarcely needs comment. Conventions and tourists brought an estimated 100 million dollars in business to Washington last year; the campaign goal of $110,000 is a small price to pay for the committee's work in stimulating this trade. Aside from Government, the visitor trade is the city's largest single source of income. But tourists and conventions do not just happen along. They must be actively solicited. The Greater National Capital Committee does this not only through sponsorship of such Washington institutions as the Cherry Blossom Festival, but also through an active program of advertising through movies, pamphlets, personal contacts and response to inquiries. The committee has had an important part in attracting the estimated 275 conventions and six million other visitors who are expected to come to Washington this year. This promotional effort, which in the course of benefiting Washington also serves to acquaint millions of Americans with the Capital of their country, deserves the business community's energetic support.

HOPE

Boys in the lazy afternoon
Who hear a motor's throaty tune
Will race to watch the plane go by
Across an open patch of sky,
To bet—in millions—and exclaim
And argue of its type or name.

I hope they never run to spy
Some planes across their sunny sky
And see, amid their stakeless bets,
The unfamiliar silhouettes—
Then turn in panic haste to run
With shadows dropping from the sun.

Senate Contempt

Senator Tydings says that Messrs. Browder and Fields have affronted the dignity of the Senate by refusing to answer some questions asked by his subcommittee. The Senate may hold these recalcitrant witnesses in contempt for this offense.

But the Senate has been held up to the contempt of the country by the actions of some of its own members. Representative Holifield told the House last week that the dignity of Congress had been impaired by unfounded charges of the Hickenloopers and McKellars against the Atomic Energy Commission and by McCarthy's irresponsible attacks on our own Foreign Office.

To these contemptible antics we might add "expendable" Harry Cain's vindictive vendetta against a reporter of Time, the hypocritical Senators who plead for a balanced budget in one breath and vote billions for pork-barrel and farm subsidies in the next, the Dixiecrats who filibuster against civil rights legislation, the absentees who neglect their legislative duties, the Jenners and McCarrans who flirt with fascism, the Kerrs who place special interests above the general welfare, etc.

If the Senate could see itself as others see it, it would realize that the actions of some of its own lesser members are far more contemptible than those of any witnesses before its investigating committees.

"Tablet's" Source

I am sure Alfred Friendly, who did such a superb job in your April 23 issue, will not find it necessary to answer Patrick Scanlon (managing editor, Brooklyn Tablet) in his rather loosely fortified defense of his newspaper (April 28). Perhaps I may cite one of many examples that may have prompted Mr. Friendly's assertion that the Tablet "gives aid and comfort to the intemperately reactionary elements on the American political scene."

Some time ago the Tablet devoted the better part of an issue to a smear attack on the proponents of world federation, particularly the United World Federalists. One portion of this smear was its statement that Vito Marcantonio was not only a supporter and sponsor of UWF but one of its "founding fathers." This preposterous statement was a pure, unadulterated lie. Marcantonio has never been associated with the World Federalists in any way, shape or form—at any time. He isn't even one of the 112 sponsors of the World Federation Resolution in the House of Representatives, which resolution UWF supports.

Inasmuch as I knew the official records and history of the United World Federalists were available to anyone anxious to obtain the facts, I was naturally upset and surprised that the official publication for the Catholic Diocese of Brooklyn would give wide circulation to a completely false statement. Not able to conceive of the Tablet itself dreaming up such a story, I attempted to discover who first created the Marcantonio-UWF myth.

And who was it? To the best of my knowledge the author was none other than Mr. Merwin K. Hart in a National Economic Letter published prior to the particular issue of the Tablet. Is it necessary for me to point out Hart as one of America's leading anti-Semitics and isolationists, who oppose, among other things, the United Nations? This, Mr. Scanlon, is one good example of giving "aid and comfort to the intemperately reactionary elements on the American political scene."

Mosinee "Communists"

The mock Communist coup in Mosinee, Wis., was humorous in a macabre sort of way. Like the comedian who jibes at events or personalities by exaggerating and carrying them to the ridiculous, this community lampooned our energetic efforts to halt communism. But the frightening aspect is that they weren't trying to be funny! Mosinee, Wis., is serious about its Communist coup. Doubtless, its motives were excellent. But aren't we all pretty well convinced of what totalitarianism means in any form?

The American Legion is a fervently patriotic group, but unfortunately they have always leaned toward the chauvinistic. However, the people of Mosinee are performing a valuable service despite themselves. They are demonstrating vividly how extravagant this drum-beating can get. When so tinged with hysteria, it's too obvious to miss.

Worse Than Crickets

In your April 30 issue (Section V), Albert S. Fulling wrote about his cricket dilemma and offered his crickets to anyone who would have them. I've seen the time I would cheerfully swap my chigger crop for his cricket chorus.

One day last year my husband induced me to play golf. The first three holes went off as usual, with my thirteen and his pars, but on the fourth I got in a weed-filled ditch. I took seven strokes in that ditch. After the seventh, as it had started to rain, I dropped out and went to the club house.

It was a raw fall day and a log fire was crackling and gleaming in the big fireplace. I sat before it several hours, letting the heat steam the moisture out of my slacks. What I did not realize, however, was that I was also letting the heat steam chiggers into me. That night I counted 75 chigger bites.

Boost For The Nats

The Washington Post, aided by Shirley Povich, is downright decent. I refer to the coverage on page 1 of your issue of April 27, giving the Nationals a boost after putting the whammy on the Athletics in a tight game away from home. Some teams, individuals or what have you, may derive more benefit through a shot in the arm by page 1 coverage than the work of one or more psychoanalysts.

Crusade Against Cancer

Progress is being made in laboratories throughout the country where top-flight researchers are fighting the war against cancer. The recent announcement of the "nitrogen mustard" developments at George Washington University amply illustrates the unceasing effort to solve the problem of cancer.

Other once "impossible" developments have come to pass. Certain hormones, given to some patients, have eased the pain of cancer, lengthened their lives, allowed them to leave sickbeds and sent them back to their work and normal routine for varying periods of time.

Antibiotics have enormously reduced the complication of infection following cancer surgery. Chemicals such as nitrogen mustards, urethane and anti-folic acids, are serving as palliatives in countless cases. To be sure, no chemical yet tested in its natural state or made radioactive, has proved to be a cure for cancer. Surgery X-rays and radium are the only real cures. Yet, with painstaking care, scientists are finding threads of evidence which eventually may indicate the origins of cancer.

We have come a long way in our ability to detect many kinds of cancer during their early and curable stages. Patients, who would have been given up as hopeless a few short years ago, are being cured today. But, and this is a grim fact, despite these advances, about 200,000 Americans will die of cancer this year.

Upward of 13 million dollars of the money contributed through the American Cancer Society's campaigns have been invested in scientific research in the last five years. Vast as this program is, however, research scientists last year could have used far more than the 3½ million dollars they received. The 1950 Cancer Crusade is being held to provide funds for the society's research activities and its service and educational programs.

Sixty percent of the funds obtained locally are spent for the support of five cancer detection centers and four cancer clinics in the District of Columbia, the Instructive Visiting Nurse Society, the Washington Home for Incurables, the Cancer Dressing Service for home patients, and the activities of the American Cancer Society's Field Army of Volunteers, plus special grants to George Washington University for applying the latest research developments to the patient as quickly as possible.

The District division during 1949 was able to increase its services because of support received from the public. Among the new achievements were the opening of tumor clinics at Garfield Hospital and Children's Hospital.

Last year 1294 persons in the District died of cancer. Most of these lives could have been saved if the patient had gone to the doctor in time. That is what's meant by education: Getting the patient to the physician in time for treatment that will lead to a happy and full life.

The public can strike back at cancer in four ways:

1. Have an annual physical examination — a fine insurance against cancer or any other disease.
2. Know the cancer danger signals. They do not always mean cancer, but they should hurry you to a doctor. They are: any sore that does not heal; a lump or thickening in the breast or elsewhere; unusual bleeding or discharge; any change in a wart or mole; persistent indigestion or difficulty in swallowing; persistent hoarseness or cough; any change in normal bowel habits.
3. Spread the word about the 1950 Cancer Crusade for the living—for you, for your family, for your friends.
4. Give and give generously to the 1950 Cancer Crusade of the American Cancer Society.

Campaign Chairman, 1950 Cancer Crusade, District of Columbia Division, American Cancer Society.

China Lobby And Formosa

By Marquis Childs

Investigation Quashed

BOTH President Truman and Secretary of State Acheson have resolutely set themselves against any investigation of the so-called Nationalist China lobby. Urging and prodding from every quarter has met with a firm: No.

The belief is that such an investigation would serve chiefly to further the bitter controversy now focused on American foreign policy in the Far East. Any benefits, in showing the sources of paid propaganda and paid pressures, would be purely incidental.

No one who knows anything about the way things work here doubts that a powerful China lobby has brought extraordinary influence to bear on Congress and the Executive. It would be hard to find any parallel in diplomatic history for the agents and the diplomatic representatives of a foreign power exerting such pressures.

The methods used cannot, of course, be compared with those of Russian communism since communism works in each country through an internal conspiracy. Nationalist China has used the techniques of direct intervention on a scale rarely, if ever, seen. The lobby has gained adherents among some former Communists in America who have in some instances carried over into this new endeavor the conspiratorial fanaticism they gave to communism.

ANOTHER reason for opposing a congressional inquiry is the difficulty—perhaps the impossibility—of digging up the underlying facts. That is particularly true with respect to sources of money. High officials here believe that Chinese Nationalists or members of their families have put in foreign banks considerably over a half billion dollars. But it is so carefully concealed that it could hardly be traced in Swiss and New York accounts to the real owners.

A plane load of 21 American newspapermen has just left for Formosa as invited guests of the Chinese Central News Agency. The news agency is subsidized by the Nationalist government. Included in the number are magazine as well as news writers. The party left on April 28 and is expected to return on May 11.

Reports indicate that Red China's preparations to assault the last stronghold of the Nationalists on Formosa are being greatly stepped up. The attack is almost certain to provoke a new wave of recriminations and charges and countercharges here in America.

Even though strategically it may be written off in advance, the fall of Formosa will be a heavy blow, highlighting the march of communism in Asia and strengthening Communists in those countries where they are already a major threat. With all this in mind, Secretary Acheson is being urged by John Foster Dulles, his Republican adviser, to take a new policy line before it is too late.

THAT LINE would be to declare that in view of the present emergency and until the conclusion of a peace treaty with Japan, the United States considers that Formosa is still a Japanese possession. Under such a declaration, the Chinese Nationalist armies now on Formosa — about 300,000 troops — would be considered internees. The United States, as the principal occupying power in Japan, would take over the occupation of Formosa.

The island was ceded by China to Japan in 1895 when the great powers began to dismember the vast and rotting Chinese empire. Negotiations to return Formosa to China began when Chiang Kai-shek and President Roosevelt met at Cairo in 1943. At the end of World War II, China, as a former ally, was sent in as the "administrative power" pending a peace settlement.

The population of Formosa is Chinese, Japanese, Korean and varying mixtures of these three. The Formosans, themselves, would probably welcome a declaration that the United States was taking over as temporary occupying power.

But such a step presents many practical difficulties as well as the hazard of a shooting war. Chiang Kai-shek and the clique remaining loyal to him would be expected to resist such a move to the last, since it would take away from them the claim to represent a Chinese government.

Their propaganda, which can be expected to grow in volume, is that Soviet Russia is now actively intervening on the side of Communist China by providing jet planes and other modern arms. Therefore, it is up to the United States to support Nationalist China in the same way. Unhappily for the Nationalists, this comes against the background of the collapse on neighboring Hainan Island where the Nationalists had twice as many troops as the Communists as well as superior sea and naval armaments.

Sander's License

I have no way of knowing whether the threatening telephone calls received by a member of the New Hampshire medical board that revoked Dr. Herman N. Sander's license are the "work of a nut." But I should like to know whether his decision was just plain puritanical or the result of deplorable professional jealousy which has cost many a life and now threatens a conscientious physician's economic future.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph Alsop

The Fallen Fig Leaves

ROME.—One of the most conspicuous effects of the maturing world situation has been to remove the fig leaves from the western European Communist Parties. In Italy and France, particularly, the Communists have abandoned the faintest pretense of constituting normal political parties with normal political aims.

Instead, the sole current objective of the French and Italian Communists is to disrupt the organization of any defense of the West. The sole long-range objective is to prepare to play the role of paramilitary fifth columns when the word of command is given. In short, the western European Communist Parties have now become naked military strategic instruments of Soviet imperialism, hardly to be distinguished from special units of the Red army.

This process is more understandable here in Italy, for the simple reason that the Italian Communist leaders still occasionally reveal their directives from Moscow to their unhappy captives, the Socialists of the Nenni group. The Nenni Socialists, in turn, occasionally confide in their former comrades of the Socialist fractions which have declared their independence.

The change in the Communist line is deeply significant for two reasons. First, it clearly reveals the intention of the Kremlin to renew the attempt to bring western Europe within the Soviet empire at a fairly early date. Second, the preparation that the Italian and French Communists are now making can have decisive effect, if and when the time ever comes for the big Soviet pressure drive westward.

THE TIME that must be prevented from coming is a time when the military weakness of the West will allow the Kremlin to make great, intimidating demonstrations of strength at Berlin, at Vienna and against Yugoslavia. The French and Italian Communists are now getting ready, in short, to strike when their countries will be terrified, confused and divided by the menace of the Red army and the Red air force to the eastward.

Here in Italy the Communist Party has been losing mass membership. But it has been strengthening and hardening its apparatus, by the purges of lukewarm elements. It has also been strengthening and hardening its paramilitary units, which are estimated to include above 100,000 men. Finally it has been intensifying its control of the transport and communications unions, which here, as in France, are the party's basic assets.

Early this winter a planned incident at Modena was the pretext for an Italian trial run of fifth column tactics. Without bringing the paramilitary units into play, the Communist high command succeeded in cutting Italy in two by paralyzing Italian transport. So serious were the effects of the Modena incident that the Ministry of the Interior and the Carabinieri now have truck units which are to replace the railroads during future emergencies.

Imagine a situation in which all of western Europe has been softened up by great Hitlerlike shows of Soviet power, accompanied by menaces of the "people's democratic atomic bomb." Imagine further an all-out attack by the Italian Communists, on the pattern of the Modena incident, but including full use of the Communist paramilitary power. The maintenance of the Italian will to resist, under these circumstances, would be a major miracle.

ON THE other hand, if these circumstances are not permitted to arise—if successful Soviet menaces are prevented by the organization of a solid Western defense in the time still allowed us—the Communists are nothing but a police problem. Furthermore, the very fact that the last fig leaves have been allowed to drop will then doom the Communist Parties in both Italy and France.

In brief, the naked use of the Communist Parties as instruments of Kremlin imperialism has already chilled the rank and file and even disquieted the leaders. It is bandwagon sentiment—it is the belief that the Kremlin represents the wave of the future—which now really holds the Communist Parties together. Once this cement begins to crumble, the parties themselves will crumble also.

The many Communists who are Italians first, or peasants first, or trades unionists first—like Di Vittorio, the trades union leader, to mention the most important—will begin to have new ideas. As the Communist apparatus weakens and splits, an opening will be afforded for the emergence of new, vigorous and independent left-wing parties. And thus a new atmosphere of security will permit the restoration of what France and Italy most need, a normal, healthy political life.

Country Teacher Cleared of Charge Of Fondling Pupil

Eufaula, Okla., May 4 (AP).—A jury today took just 43 minutes to clear teacher W. E. Dickey of a charge he fondled an 11-year-old girl pupil under her dress.

Dickey, wiping his forehead nervously, had taken the stand briefly to deny the accusation.

Mrs. Dickey, who teaches with him, burst into tears and embraced her husband.

Several students, many of whom had testified in Dickey's behalf, rushed to their schoolmaster and patted him on the back.

Hatch Act Bill Passed

leave administration of the local politics section in the hands of the Civil Service Commission. The Senate version would have taken it out of that agency's hands, and left it to the separate government agencies here.

Unexcepted Opposition

The Hatch act compromise ran into unexpectedly sharp opposition in the House when the version prepared by House and Senate conferences was called to a vote by Representative Burr P. Harrison (D., Va.).

House Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin (R., Mass.), suggested that the bill would leave the Civil Service Commission in complete control of the politics of the counties adjoining Washington.

"The purpose of the bill is to do exactly the opposite," said Harrison.

He added that the Civil Service Commission is now doing what Martin suggested would be done under the bill.

Representative Herman P. Eberharter (D., Pa.) wanted to know if the bill did not include special legislation to benefit the residents of Maryland and Virginia. Harrison said if there was anything special about the legislation, it was enacted by Congress 12 years ago—when the basic law first provided for local participation in the areas near Washington.

Supported by Committees

Representative Lansdale G. Sasscer (D., Md.) told the House the revision had the support of the Republican and Democratic State central committees of Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties.

At one point Representative Martin asked if one result of the act would be to discourage nonpartisanship at local levels, and Representative Karl M. LeCompte (R., Iowa) conceded "yes, that is about it."

Representative Harrison told the House that the purpose of the section applying to Maryland and Virginia is to let Federal workers take part in local politics in the parties of their choice.

"If they want to be Republicans they can be Republicans," he said. "If they want to be Democrats, they can be Democrats."

He said the existing commission regulation had worked "great injustice."

He said the nonpartisan organization had become a political party in fact, and the Federal employes who don't want to join that group are barred from participation in local affairs.

Harrison outlined these other main features of the bill:

1. Where the present Hatch Act requires dismissal of Federal employes for violations, the bill would let the Civil Service, by unanimous vote, impose lesser penalties, down to a minimum of 30 days suspension without pay.

2. An annual report to the President for transmission to Congress would have to be made on cases where the Hatch Act violation penalty was less than dismissal. Either House could call for the testimony submitted in any case.

3. A final section makes publication and distribution of anonymous campaign literature a criminal offense.

When the bill was put to a note, Representative Eberharter demanded a division, or standing vote, that showed a one-vote margin for the bill. The vote was 57 to 56. This was questioned as not showing a House quorum and the automatic roll call followed.

Can Issue Regulation

Both the existing and proposed laws say that the Civil Service Commission can issue regulations authorizing Government employes to take active part in political management and political campaigns in municipalities or other political subdivisions in the areas of Maryland and Virginia in the immediate vicinity of Washington. The commission can do the same for municipalities where the majority of voters are Government employes.

Present law says the commission can permit the Federal employe participation in local politics to the extent it deems to be in their domestic interest. This leeway would be erased in the new bill, and instead statutory limitation would be placed on the power of the commission. This limitation would say that no commission regulations permitting political participation by Government employes could impose any restrictions on their doing so through the medium of any political organization or political party of his own choosing, including participation as an individual, candidate or manager in primaries, conventions, caucuses, or meetings, meetings of any such political organization or political party.

Sees Weakening Effect

Representative Edward T. Miller (R., Md.), only member of Maryland to oppose the bill in the final vote, said he felt it would weaken the Hatch Act. "In this day of Pendergast politics, the less we have Government employes mixed up in political pressures, the better it is," he commented.

Representative J. Glenn Beall (R., Md.) and the four Maryland Democrats in the House, voted for the bill.

Six of the eight Virginia members now in the House, all Democrats, voted for the bill. Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.), an original sponsor of the amendment on local political participation in Virginia and Maryland, did not vote in the roll call, nor did Representative Watkins M. Abbitt (D., Va.).

House Gets Bill to Lighten Property Tax

A bill to remove the District personal property tax from household furnishings and personal effects was introduced in the House yesterday.

The bill had been drafted by the District Bar Association's tax committee. Jo V. Morgan, chairman of that committee, outlined is provisions in a morning hearing before the House and Senate District fiscal affairs subcommittees.

Chariman Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) of the House subcommittee, gave the idea of personal property tax relief a cool reception. It was Smith who later filed the bill in the House, but he made clear he was not committing himself to its provisions.

In the hearing Assistant District Corporation Counsel Harry L. Walker said the District Commissioners favor in principle the removal of the personal property tax from household furnishings and personal effects. The Commissioners are having a bill drafted to do this. The tax rate is $2 per $100. Both bills would keep the tax on personal property used for business or trade.

In another action the two subcommittees agreed to stick by an earlier decision against revising the District sales tax this year. The decision was made in an executive session after the committees heard testimony on bills to exempt from the sales tax the services of linen supply houses and the printing charges for local shopping guides.

D. C., Virginia Sign Truck Tag Treaty

District contractors may now use their District-registered trucks on contracting jobs in Virginia without going to the expense of registering the vehicles in that Commonwealth.

The dual registration, previously required, has been abolished under a reciprocity agreement concluded between District Traffic Director George E. Keneipp and Virginia authorities. Keneipp announced the agreement yesterday.

The former requirement had proved so costly in some instances, according to Keneipp, that some District contractors had refused to bid on Virginia jobs.

The new agreement permits all general or road contractors, who qualify as private carriers, to use District registered trucks without registering them in Virginia providing they are garaged in the District at least four nights a week.

The agreement does not cover common or contract carriers operating in intrastate commerce.

A private carrier was defined roughly by Keneipp as "a person who is hauling his own material or material connected with his work."

Common or contract carriers haul material for others, he said.

'No Change' Is Report On Mrs. Vandenberg

No change was reported yesterday in the condition of Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg, wife of Michigan's Republican senior Senator. Taken to Georgetown University Hospital in serious condition last Sunday, a slight improvement was noted Wednesday, the Senator's staff reported. Senator Vandenberg, in the hospital recuperating from a tumor operation last month, was "doing nicely" yesterday.

The new Highway Bridge will be opened to traffic Tuesday at noon with the help of Miss Washington and various area officials.

Charles Stofberg, vice chairman of the Citizens Dedication Committee, said Miss Mary Jane Hayes, 1949 queen of the District, will cut the ribbon at ceremonies at the District end of the bridge.

Speakers at the dedication, he said, will include Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.) and District Commissioners John Russell Young and Gordon R. Young. A musical program by the Metropolitan Police Band will start at 11:30 a. m., he said.

After the ribbon-cutting, the official party will drive south (wrong way on the one-way bridge) to the Virginia side and return, Stofberg said. Then the bridge will be opened to traffic.

Big Four Deputies Fail on Austria For 253d Time

London, May 4 (AP).—The Big Four Deputy Foreign Ministers failed again today to make progress toward writing an Austrian independence treaty. It was their 253d meeting since the war on the Austrian question.

The Russian deputy, Georgi Zarubin, announced he was ready to talk about Article 9 of the treaty draft and nothing else. That article, dealing with demilitarization, already has been agreed upon.

Samuel Reber, United States deputy, asked Zarubin bluntly if Russia wanted to conclude an Austrian treaty. He got no direct reply.

Has the U.S. a Policy for Peace?

WITH our government under heavy pressure at home and abroad, many people are asking themselves whether the United States has a well-integrated, rounded plan strong enough to counteract Russian aggression.

To this question, The Reporter answers an emphatic "Yes" – provided, as Max Ascoli, editor of The Reporter, says in the editorial of the current issue, the people, individually and through their organizations, give their full assistance and guidance to the government in the world civil war.

In other articles: From Washington, Harold Graves explains how the government is moving from "crisis" diplomacy to total diplomacy. Military expert William Hessler examines our military strength against our commitments–to see whether we are promising aid we can't deliver. Vincent Checchi shows the price of European integration – to the Europeans and to us. Another article describes how foolish some of our actions must appear from the windows of the Kremlin and how skillfully the Russians camouflage their weaknesses.

Aside from focusing on a central theme in each issue, The Reporter gives its readers constant coverage of the events that matter at home and abroad.

The news of next week and next month will be more clearly understood if you read The Reporter.

An English critic finds it ironic that the United States should spend millions to counteract Soviet propaganda against the U.S. when the most damaging anti-U.S. propaganda is pouring out of California.

Scrap Prices Again Rise

Pittsburgh, May 4 (AP).—Pittsburgh district industrial scrap prices swung upward today for the second time within a week. One major firm purchased No. 1 heavy melting at $35.50 a ton. This represented a $1.50 per ton increase. A $2 boost last week brought the price to $34.

TVs Pounded Down; General List Follows

New York, May 4 (AP).—Radio-television stocks had one of the worst setbacks of the year today in a generally lower market.

At the end of a relentless pounding by selling forces, leading issues closed with losses of 1 to around 4 points. There was a slight recovery late in the day.

Pressure elsewhere centered mainly on automobile, aircraft and some railroad issues where declines were posted running to more than a point. The balance of the market was on distinctly shaky ground.

Except for TV issues, which were on the defensive all day, the main body of stocks did fairly well until the final hour. Heavy selling developed and prices moved down rapidly. Resistance shaped up in the last few minutes and numerous stocks finished a trifle above the lows of the session.

Large-scale turnover in the last hour helped to swell sales to 2,150,000 shares, which compared with 2,120,000 Wednesday.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks lost .5 of 1 point at 76.5, biggest reversal since April 24. The rail and industrial groups accounted for most of the decline, while the utility division was off a minor amount.

Of the 15 most active stocks, none had a plus sign next to it. One was unchanged. Eight of the 15 were TV shares.

Today's decline was evidently touched off by an announcement by Emerson Radio in particular and unfavorable trade news in general.

Emerson Radio announced production of all TV units had stopped except for two new models. The new models were priced well below comparable sets the company had been making. Benjamin Abrams, president, said a softening of the market forced the company to bring out the new sets sooner than expected and also forced deeper than planned price reductions.

"Retailing Daily," a trade publication, published reports of a fall-off in TV sales in Chicago and Philadelphia. The slump was described as an earlier than anticipated summer drop in business.

Zenith Radio slumped more than 5 points at the worst and closed 4⅛ down at 56⅜. Radio Corp., the most active stock, lost ⅞ at 20¾, Philco cracked 3⅛ to 47⅛, Emerson 2¾ to 33½, Admiral 2 to 31⅞, Motorola 2¾ to 44, Magnavox 1¼ to 19½, International Telephone ⅜ to 13⅞, and Avco Mfg. ⅛ to 8⅛.

Special weakness in the aircraft section was linked by some observers to President Truman's statement that defense spending will be less in 1951-1952. Smaller defense expenditures, in other words, could mean less money spent for planes.

New York Cotton

New York, May 4 (AP).—Cotton futures slumped more than $2 a bale today on a late wave of liquidation, with stop-loss orders accelerating the decline. Traders termed the reaction primarily a long overdue technical correction.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, May 4 (AP).—Grain and soybean futures moved up and down nervously today, with only wheat showing any strength at the finish.

Soybeans started strong on higher cottonseed oil futures prices, but the market soon dipped and stayed on the down side for most of the session. Selling in beans unsettled wheat for a while, but wheat came back later. Corn and oats started lower and were weak throughout the session.

Wheat closed ¾ higher to ⅜ lower, corn was down 2¼ to 2⅜, oats were 1¼ to 1¾ lower, rye was off 1¼ to 2½, soybeans were unchanged to 2¼ lower, and lard was down 12 to 28 cents a hundred pounds.

$14 Million Bid For U. S. Plant Used by Tucker

Two Chicago businessmen and an attorney yesterday filed a bid for the Government's big wartime aircraft engine plant in Chicago and said they planned to lease out part of the plant for production of the Tucker automobile.

Their bid to the General Services Administration was 14 million dollars for the plant, which cost the Government $120,826,000, including equipment worth 53 million dollars.

Bigger Return Possible

The bid of 14 million dollars is for the property and buildings. The bidders explained that through other subleases they would undertake they believed the Government could get an additional return of 30 million dollars for equipment in the plant.

They said persons with whom they have talked about subleases have indicated they would pay that much for the machinery and equipment.

The Chicago men asked the GSA to sell the western half of the plant to them for eight million dollars, or lease it to them at a starting annual rental of $640,000. They asked an option to buy the remainder of the plant for six million dollars or lease it at a starting rental of $480,000 a year.

Business Outlook, Other Market News on Page 27

The proposal came from Myron Hokin, president of the Century American Corp.; Attorney Benjamin Z. Gould, and Robert Swikel, real estate broker, all of Chicago.

The Government received one other bid for the big plant yesterday. Distillers International Trading Corp., Chicago, offered to buy the entire property for five million dollars and in addition to pay 20 percent of the net income from the property up to a total purchase price of 20 million dollars.

Production of the Tucker car first was undertaken at the plant, but the Tucker Corp. failed before getting full-scale operation.

Zwikel told reporters negotiations are under way with successors to the Tucker Corp. who want to lease part of the plant to resume production of the car. He declined to discuss these plans in detail and referred queries to Tucker Corp. trustees, Aaron Colnon and John Chatz of Chicago.

"Our plan is not to deprive the Tucker people of a chance to make their car,, " Zwikel said.

Subleases Anticipated

Zwikel said that if his group is allowed to buy or lease the plant, subleases will be granted to small businesses, war veterans and to other manufacturers and nindustries.

The Distillers International Trading Corp. did not specify the uses it would make of the property.

The corporation asked for prosession of the plant within 30 days, and said it could start operation within 60 days. It offered to pay 20 percent down on the five million dollar purchase price, with the remainder in equal semi-annual payments over 20 years.

One on the Aisle—

A Masterpiece Of Simplicity

By Richard L. Coe

"THE BICYCLE THIEF," at the Trans-Lux, is indeed as fine a picture as the honors heaped on its attest. By all means, see it.

What makes it a great picture is its simplicity, and that everything in it fits beautifully together. Everything is a part of everything else, a perfect mosaic.

Consider its simplicity. A man's bicycle is stolen. He must find it to live, to get his family bread; without it he loses his job pasting advertisements on the walls of Rome. To buy it has cost his wife her sheets, the precious heart of her wedding dowry. To replace it, he takes to stealing, for which he is caught. Though let go before the police arrive, his shame has been unbearable, for his little son witnessed his degradation.

Consider its mosaic quality. The loving solidarity of the little family is tenderly expressed by the relief of the troubled wife, awaiting her next child, by the study trust of the little son who has a job of his own. When the mother has been to a fortune teller, we watch the father's annoyance with her for wasting money on this superstition and we think we have had done with the old woman's apartment. But we go there again when the father searches for advice after both civil and religious authorities have failed him. We watch the sudden anger of the father at the child, the latter's bruised spirit, the father's anxiety when he learns a boy has fallen into the Tiber and his desperate effort to lighten the child with a dinner of meat and wine.

Here, then, is life as anyone can understand it and be gripped by a tragedy seemingly as far from oneself as the loss of a bicycle can be disastrous.

The irony of it will be too much for the fearful. A powerful New York critic told me not long ago she considered the picture Communistic and irreligious. This is utter nonsense. She was perhaps taken in by the irony of the German seminarians who crowd the poor man and his son into the rain or by the scene in the church when the victim is trying to catch up with a man whom he had seen talking to the thief. Madame Critic should go to an Italian church and watch the restless shuffling about in God's house. Or she should take a German translator with her to the film.

Intensely Religious in Approach

For "The Bicycle Thief," more than it is anything else, is intensely religious. It believes in the brotherhood of man, in the dignity of the individual. When one watches the cold carelessness with which the cycle is given him in return for the precious sheets, when one notes the futility of complaining to forces which are supposed to uphold the law, when one sees the substitution of form for spirit in the church luncheon for the poor and then observes the doggedness with which only the very poor can uphold a friend in need, one gets a glimpse of human dignity that might delight the Lord.

The acting is done by nonprofessionals, and while it has the appearance of being inspired performing, it is patently the work of Director Vittorio de Sica and his cameramen which performs this seeming miracle. And very much a part of the film itself is the score by Alessandro Cicognini, which, Puccini-like, has lyrical, gentle compassion that will delight and nurse your soul.

"The Bicycle Thief," in short, is a masterpiece.

THE TRANS-LUX, by the way, is going all out for "The Bicycle Thief," with nine showings today and tomorrow, last one being at 12:25 ayem.

THE PIX, beginning Monday, is going on a summer schedule, which means that on Mondays through Fridays the doors will open at 5:30 with no afternoon performances . . . The Pix has gotten to be a popular late show spot, and so far as the management is concerned, the move is a natural.

"TWO BLIND MICE" is bound for Chicago after it leaves the Gayety Saturday night . . . The farce about governmental red tape has attracted such as General Bradley, Mme. Pandit and the 5-year-old daughter of Kim Hunter, who saw her mom as the leading lady at a matinee . . . Miss Hunter, by the way, was cited the other day by Director Elia Kazan as his choice for the role of Stella in the projected screen version of "A Streetcar Named Desire," the part she created . . . Melvyn Douglas will be guest of honor at an AVC reception this afternoon at 1751 New Hampshire ave.; he's been a member since '46.

"DREAM NO MORE" was shown last night for the first time at the Jewish Community Center, where it will be repeated Saturday evening at 8:30 . . . The film, in English, is one of the new series of feature-length pictures to be made in Israel . . . The Cafritz auditorium screen, by the way, is now full size.

JULIAN HUXLEY'S "Monkey Into Man" tops the Cinema 16 program tonight and tomorrow at 8:40 at the Institute of Contemporary Arts; it's a scientific film with music by William Alwyn . . . Also on the program are John Ferne's "And So They Live" and "La Rose et le Reseda."

VAUGHN'S GAL: Ella Raines has the feminine lead opposite Vaughn Monroe in his screen bow, "Singing Guns." It's a musical Western from Writer Max Brand, now at the Metropolitan

Monroe Gets Fine Help in Singing Guns

By Orval Hopkins
Post Reporter

THEY tagged Vaughn Monroe's first movie "Singing Guns," and it's not nearly as silly as the label is. In fact, thanks mostly to the performances of a couple of working thespians, it turns out to be pretty middlin' horse opera.

The journeyman actors are Ward Bond, who plays a sheriff, and Walter Brennan, who portrays the kindly old do-gooder he is so often cast as. Monroe plays it mostly deadpan, and you'd have to say that, given less expert "support," this might have been a cripple.

The story is about a bandit who has a million bucks in gold stashed away in a cave. This is Monroe. He gets to be sheriff, never mind how, and then he and the real sheriff have a contest to see who's going to arrest Monroe (sic), win the girl (Ella Raines) and get the million seeds. It didn't seem nearly that complicated when I saw it at the Metropolitan Theater yesterday with a large number of other juveniles.

Anyway, Vaughn finds occasion to sing, in his effortless, if emotionless, way, three songs—"Singing My Way Back Home" "Mexicali Trail" and "Mule Train." Surprising as it may seem, his rendition of the last number is virtually the high spot of the picture. For the rest of it, Monroe is simply an inexperienced actor working in the movies, and there's no reason to suppose he won't improve. He hasn't the natural grace and ease of a Bing Crosby, but then few have.

Miss Raines plays an utterly routine Western lassie, I'm afraid, but I wouldn't say she wasn't trying. Jeff Corey is a convincing villain but, once again, it's Bond and Brennan who hold this thing together. The film is done in Trucolor and the process could stand some work.

When he's a bandit, by the way, Monroe bears the rippling name "Rhiannon." It's a handle presumably thought up by Max Brand, upon whose novel this picture was based.

The newsreel has some interesting shots of a slambang fight that took place during the May Day parade in New York. They could have been better, but it was a great try. A "Little Audrey" cartoon is pretty bad.

Bing Without Roof In Gay Paree

Paris, May 4 (U.P.).—Bing Crosby lost his hair, his tie and his hotel room today.

But by evening Der Bingle had recovered all three.

The singer lamented his dilemma when he spoke at a luncheon of the American Club. His hotel reservation had run out, and an anonymous tourist took over his room.

Crosby said he left his toupee and tie behind in the confusion of moving. At the time he spoke, he hadn't had a roof over his head or any prospects of getting one.

Some hours later a happier Crosby, hair, tie and all, was welcomed at another hotel.

THIS AFTERNOON, at 4:30, brings John Mason Brown to the Mayflower for his annual talk, "Seeing Things," on matters theatrical, a benefit for the Frontier Nursing Association.

THE PAN AMERICAN UNION tonight at 8 will be the setting for the second in the series of films by Gabriel Figueroa, the Mexican cinematographer being honored by the Council of the Organization of American States . . . Tonight's showing is for "Maria Candelaria," the Dolores Del Rio-Pedro Armendariz picture Washington first saw as "Portrait of Maria."

"CANDIDA" will be acted tonight and tomorrow night at 8:30 by the International Players of International Student House, 1825 R st.; seats at the door.

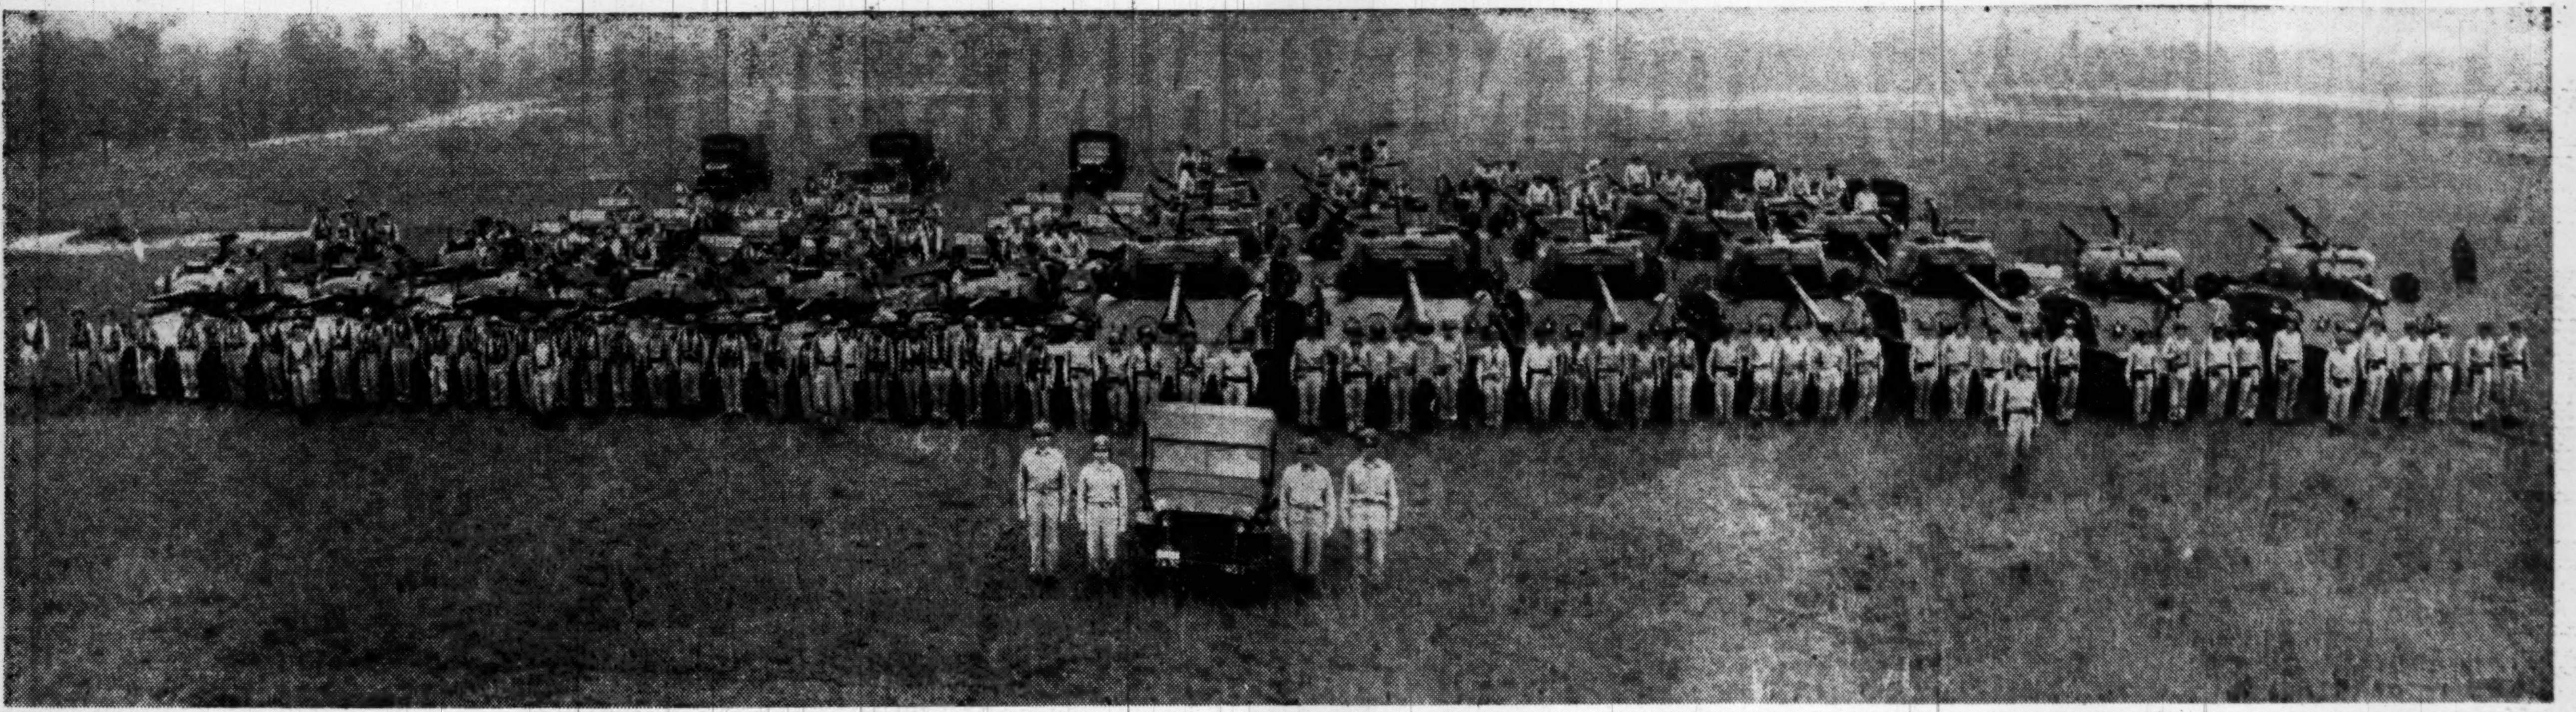
'Brave Rifles' to Mark 104th Anniversary Today Like All Good Soldiers



TWO COMPANIES OF THE THIRD ARMORED CAVALRY REGIMENT MAKE UP THIS FAST, POWERFUL FORCE OF VEHICLES. AT LEFT—COMPANY OF RECONNAISANCE BATTALION. AT RIGHT—COMPANY OF MEDIUM TANK BATTALION

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

The Brave Rifles will recall today—at Fort George G. Meade, Md.—in the manner of soldiers the world over—their 104 years of brave and bloody history.

From 11 a. m. today until 2 a. m. Saturday the Third Armored Cavalry Regiment will hold open house for its friends, civilian and military alike, over a large part of the Fort Meade reservation.

There will be a parade, of course, athletic events, a polo game on muleback with broomstick mallets and demonstrations of equipment. And for those who like to see what makes a military unit what it is, there will be a display of historical documents and trophies attended by two soldiers in Mexican War uniforms.

These documents, many written in the fine practiced hand of clerks who took their penmanship seriously, contain the reason for today's show. For the Third Armored Cavalry Regiment has weathered many vicissitudes of war and history to become the powerful mechanized fighting team it is today.

Just as its motto goes back to the Mexican War, so do its ancient records bear the names of men whose deeds have become household words in the years between then and now.

You can start with "Jeb" Stuart and read down to George S. Patton.

The Third came into being June 4, 1846, by virtue of War Department General Order No. 18, which reflected an Act of Congress of May 19, 1846, authorizing a Regiment of Mounted Riflemen. It was organized to open and protect an overland route to the Pacific Northwest, but by the time it had become a regiment, war with Mexico intervened.

Still fresh from home, it was hurled against the fortress of Chapultepec, barring the army's way into Mexico City. The rifles planted their flag on the citadel and kept it there and by that act earned the title which today sets them apart.

General Scott came across the regiment the day of Chapultepec and was promptly moved to one of those flights which in those days belonged to war as surely as powder smoke.

"Brave Rifles," he cried, "Veterans! You have been baptized in fire and blood and come out steel!"

From Vera Cruz in 1847 to central Europe in 1945, the Brave Rifles by their deeds have won 22 battle streamers for their golden standard. They have had a part in every war since 1846 and the tattered battle flags which hang along the corridors of their headquarters proclaim their valor.

Between the Mexican War and the Civil War the regiment became the Third U. S. Cavalry, and as such it fought Indians in many isolated but nonetheless deadly affrays. It served both in Cuba and in the Philippines and in World Wars I and II.

Between the two great World Wars the Third Calvalry became almost as much a part of Washington as Pennsylvania ave. Regimental headquarters and two squardons were stationed at Fort Myer, Va., and served as ceremonial troops for the unending round of parades, processions and State affairs in a world capital for more than 20 years.

In the same time also, troopers from the Third Cavalry paced the slow and solemn round before the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier at Arlington, 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

The Third Cavalry was broken up at the outset of World War II so as to conform to the new organization of cavalry groups instead of regiments. As the Third Cavalry Group, it came back to Washington in 1946, stationed at Fort Meade, but no longer a ceremonial outfit.

Its business today is the unspectacular work of learning the soldier's trade with the deadliest set of tools ever placed in soldiers' hands.

In 1948, the Third became a regiment again, the Third Armored Cavalry, the rightful and unabashed successor to the honors and traditions it remembers today.

Program of Celebration For 'Brave Rifles'

Following is the program for today's celebration:

11:30 to 11:45 a. m. Dismounted Review of the Regiment at the Post Parade Ground.

1:30 to 5 p. m. Display of Vehicles, Weapons, Equipment, Trophies and Field Kitchen.

1:30 to 2 p. m. Light Aviation Demonstration.

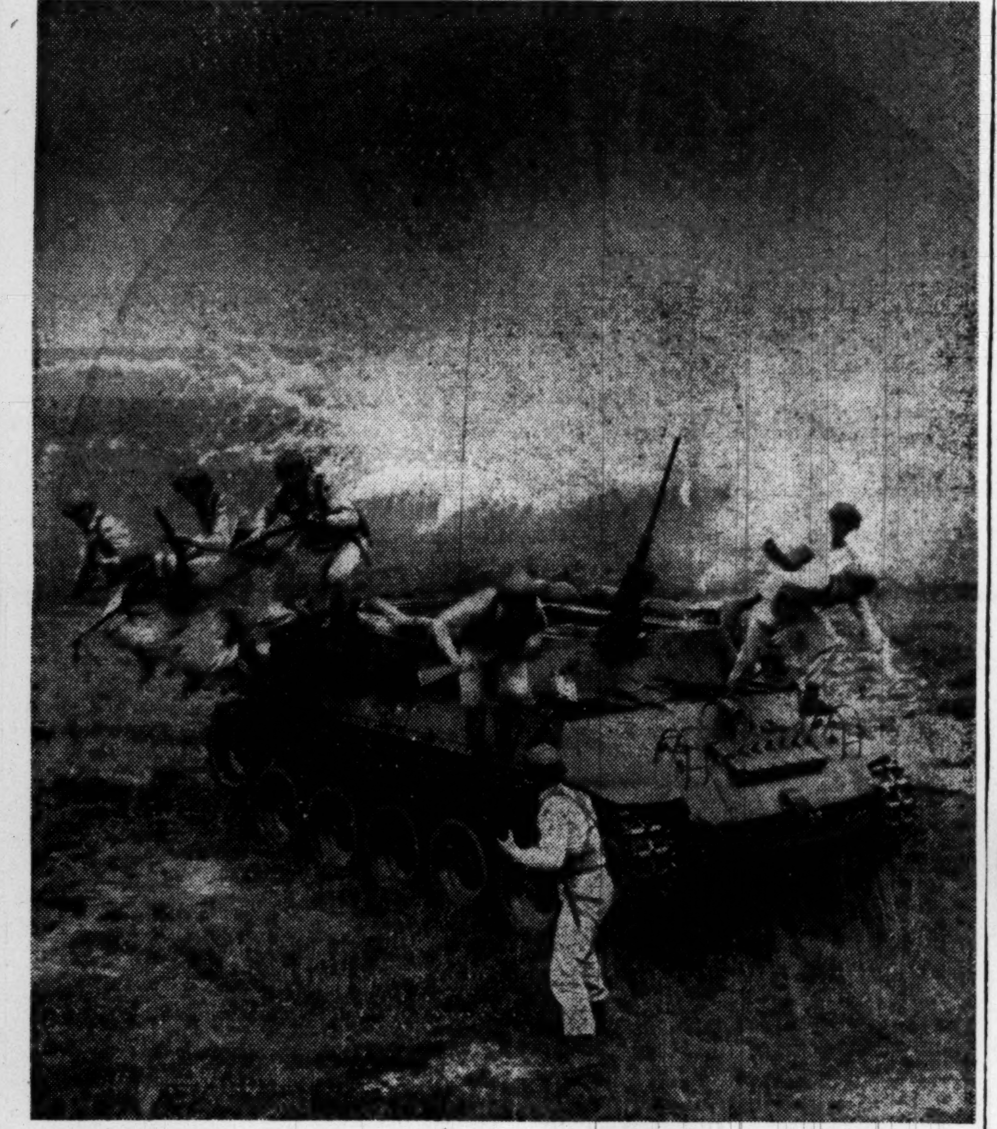
2 to 4 p. m. Athletic Events.

3 p. m Refreshments from Field Kitchen.

1:30 to 5 p. m Open House in one Company of each Battalion.

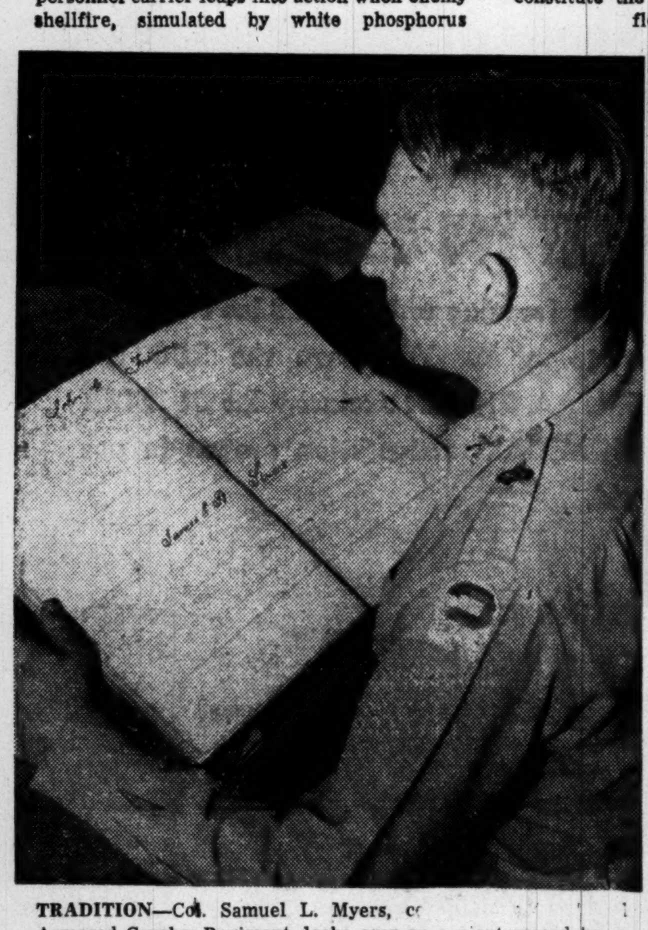
1:30 to 5 p. m Tank and Jeep Rides.

8 p. m. to Midnight. Anniversary Dances at Officers Club, NCO Club, Service Club No. 2 and Service Club No. 5.



By Henry Rohland—The Washington Post

BAILING OUT—Crew of the new M-39 tracked personnel carrier leaps into action when enemy shellfire, simulated by white phosphorus grenade, strikes nearby in training. These men constitute the flexible foot troops of a very flexible organization



TRADITION—Col. Samuel L. Myers, c Armored Cavalry Regiment, looks over an ancient record book, containing names of the Regiment's officers from 1846 to 1862. At top, is the record of Lieut. Col. John C. Fremont, "the Pathfinder," and at the bottom, Lieut. James Ewell Brown Stuart, the "Jeb" Stuart who gained world renown as a cavalry leader

Interne 'Stumps' Census Taker, Medical Student

Hartford, Conn., May 4 (AP).—The Census taker had got the routine answers to all his preliminary questions.

"How many hours did you work last week?"

"Last week? asked the other man with a slight pause for reckoning. "126 hours."

The census taker did a double take and asked what the job was. Hospital interne. Pay? None.

"Hard job, isn't it?" asked the young interne conversationally, as the Census taker closed his portfolio with an audible sigh and prepared to leave. "You look tired. What do you usually do?

"Me" said the Census taker with a faint grin. "I'm a medical student."

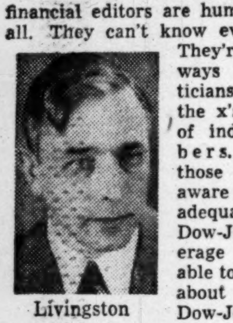
Speed Makes Dow-Jones Index Favorite in Newspaper Office

By J. A. Livingston

WHY, ask several readers, if the Dow-Jones stock market average is deficient, as you say it is, do so many newspapers publish it—the New York Times, the Chicago Daily News, The Washington Post, the Philadelphia Bulletin, the Cleveland News, and so on?

That's a really searching question. The obvious answer is that financial editors are human, after all. They can't know everything. They're not always statisticians, hep to the x's and y's of index numbers. Even those that are aware of the inadequacy of the Dow-Jones average are not able to do much about it. The Dow-Jones index compensates for statistical shortcomings in speed and availability.



Livingston

The Dow-Jones averages for industrial, rail and utility stocks are printed over the Dow-Jones news ticker five times a day, about 15 minutes after the hour. On Wednesday, May 3, the 12 noon average was printed at 12:12. That's fast moving. No other average gets into circulation that promptly. Which means that people in brokerage board rooms, financial editors, and others can follow the course of the market from hour to hour. That's an important service.

Since most newspapers of any size have Dow-Jones news tickers in their offices, they can print the houh-to-hour results quickly. For afternoon papers requiring a quick over-all summary of what's what in Wall Street, the Dow-Jones indexes are speed demons. It's a case of a rough-and-ready yardstick being better than none.

THE PRIMARY criticism of the Dow-Jones average is that it's a simple, arithmetic average. A stock, like American Can, selling at 116, has more influence in the average percentagewise than General Motors, selling around 85. Yet General Motors is a far bigger company. It has 44,100,000 shares outstanding versus Can's 2,474,000 shares. Its market value is $3,800,000,000, Can's $287,000,000. To correct for this, Standard & Poor's for example, or Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Beane weight their indexes. They multiply price by the number of shares outstanding.

A second criticism of the Dow-Jones average is that it's not representative of the market as a whole. The stocks in it are blue chips. That's true, but not avoidable. If you wanted an absolute measure of the stock market's ups and downs you'd have to take all stocks, multiply prices by the number of share outstanding, and add. The total would be the value of all stocks from one day to the next.

That, however, would be no 20-minute job. The result would hardly be available the same day. It would be too late to serve as a guide to day-to-day market movement. Therefore, speed demands fewer stocks.

THE DOW-JONES index consists, all told, of 65 stocks. Standard & Poor's daily stock index consists of 90 stocks. In selecting stocks for an index, compilers want companies that will endure. You don't want to change the index periodically. Therefore, you choose stocks of strong companies, which give such indexes a blue-chip bias.

Recognizing this, Standard & Poor's supplements its 90-stock daily average with a weekly stock index comprising 365 industrial shares, 20 railroads and 31 utilities. Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Beane has a weekly stock index of 435 industrials, 23 rails and 35 utilities. These are broad indexes of the market. And they perform differently than the indexes with relatively few stocks.

Whereas the Dow-Jones average of 30 industrial shares is 2 percent above the 1946 high, and the Standard & Poor's 50-stock index is only 3 percent below that level, the broad indexes—Standard & Poor's 365 and Merrill Lynch's 435 industrials—are both nearly 10 percent short of that goal. This reflects the blue chip character of the market. The investment trust and investor concentration of purchases of established companies is emphasized in the indexes with a fewer number of stocks.

FROM A SPEED standpoint, Dow-Jones could readily shift over to a weighted index—multiplying stock prices by the number of shares outstanding. The extra computation probably would not add five minutes to the compilation. (Standard & Poor's completes its 90-stock index 22 minutes after the close of the market.)

However, weighting would require recomputation of the index back for many years—to get a consistent series. It would take hundreds of man-hours of work. And it would result in a revision of past patterns in men's minds. It would uproot habit. Yet that's progress. The Dow-Jones index today is sustained by the speed of its transmission, not by statistical validity. That's because speed in keeping tabs on the stock market is at a premium in newspaper and brokerage offices.

Pan American World Airways, Inc., and consolidated affiliates reported estimated net income of $2,488,943, equal to 40 cents a share, for 1949.

This compared with $4,590,726 or 75 cents a share for the previous year.

Gross revenues of $151,987,000 for 1949 included $13,967,000 of estimated United States mail pay, after a reserve of seven million in excess of the amount currently receivable under temporary mail rates, the annual report said. This compared with gross revenues of $145,216,000 for 1948, including $9,547,000 of estimated United States mail pay after reserves of one million dollars.

Exact earnings for 1949 cannot be determined until conclusion of mail rate proceedings now pending before the Civil Aeronautics Board relating to the system's operating divisions, the report added.

Pepsi Cola Launches Special Campaigns

Wilmington, Del., May 4 (AP).—President Alfred N. Steele of Pepsi Cola Co. announced plans for building up the markets of the firm's franchised bottlers.

"Special advertising and merchandising campaigns are already in progress," Steele told stockholders at the annual meeting.

Steele said that though sales moved upward during the first quarter of 1950 the company lost about $100,000. This compares with a net profit of $570,000 for the first quarter of 1949.

James G. Blaine, president of the Marine Midland Trust Co. of New York, was elected to the board of directors replacing Albert E. Winger, who was not a candidate. Eight other directors were reelected.

Steele reported that Treasurer Joseph A. Murphy has resigned, effective May 5.

Seaboard R. R. Plans $30-Million Issue

The Seaboard Air Line Railroad Co. has filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission for authority to issue 30 million dollars of new first mortgage bonds.

The issue, to be known as Series B, would be dated May 1, 1950, to mature in 30 years. It would be offered at public competitive bidding to determine the interstate rate.

Seaboard said it proposes to use the proceeds, along with cash from its treasury, to call for redemption, as soon as practicable, $31,534,500 of its outstanding first mortgage 4 percent bonds, Series A, dated to mature January 1, 1996.

CONTEMPORARY DESIGN—Modern furniture with that cozy look has been introduced. This comfortable living room ensemble is part of a collection by T. H. Robsjohn-Gibbings now on display at Mayer and Company. The designer hopes to establish a true American tradition in furniture, combining the charm of the old fashioned pieces with modern color and styling

New Furniture Both Modern, 'Traditional'

Modern furniture that is "traditional" as well has been introduced to Washington markets.

These contemporary designs by T. H. Robsjohn-Gibbings have many earmarks of American decorating traditions with enough up-to-date touches to make them perfectly adaptable to modern households.

The old-fashioned rocking chair, wood-cradled sofa, sawbuck table, slat-back chair and spindle bed are all there, but with new modern elegance. The wood is the indigenous standby, walnut. But you'd never recognize it. It has been finished to a cool, pale shade of faun brown.

The rigid simplicity of design is softened by subtle outdoor colors of green and brown. The furniture is being shown in Washington by Mayer & Co.

A Communication

Weaknesses in Atom Bombing Strategy

Signers of this letter are faculty members at Harvard University and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

THIS STATEMENT is the product of a deep apprehension over the present strategic position of the United States. It is addressed to questions of military strategy and to these alone. We emphasize that we do not regard military defense as the only or even the first source of security of the United States. That security we regard, first of all, as depending on the economic strength and political cooperation of the free world. These latter are the first tasks of American policy. We are concerned here with military policy, not as a means of preparing for war, but as a means of gaining time during which economic and political efforts may help create the situations out of which lasting peace may emerge.

We believe that our present strategic position is founded on a misplaced faith in atomic weapons and strategic bombing. This system of defense seems to us, for reasons we shall set forth below, to impair the moral and political strength of the United States in the present period and to evade the true requirements of national security. We believe that the United States must move beyond its present central reliance on atomic warfare and must accept the costs in money and inconvenience involved in such a policy. These costs are to be measured against the loss of the American moral position in the free world, the invitation to limited aggression inherent in the present strategy, and the possibly catastrophic dangers to ourselves and civilization in an atomic war.

THE POWER which forces the United States to adopt a posture of defense is the Soviet Union. We make no estimate as to the immediacy of the Soviet threat to the security of the United States and western Europe. For present purposes we assume the danger and the corresponding need for Western military strength sufficient to deter Soviet aggression. The difference between a deterrent force and one that accords absolute security in the event of actual aggression must be emphasized. In case of actual war, the Nation can have only the single objective of overwhelming superiority; but the prevention of war is a different undertaking, and there is room for argument as to the size and nature of the effort required.

The present defensive position of the United States depends heavily on its possession of atomic weapons coupled with faith in strategic bombardment. This has been made evident in the recent controversies over the roles of the several services and in the allocation of defense appropriations. It is implicit in the size and distribution of our ground forces—the fact that at present the United States has about 10 divisions, few of which are fully manned and equipped—and in the subordinate role assigned to tactical air power.

This defense plan, with its emphasis on atomic weapons and strategic air power, has been misleadingly attractive to the American people and Congress. It has promised us all great economies in financial outlay, in manpower, and in political inconvenience. We believe that this plan has been shaped less by a dispassionate view of the United States in the world than by political factors, including the ebb and flow of interservice rivalry. However, it is less important to allocate responsibility for present strategy than to assess its consequences. These, we believe, raise questions which go to the roots of the position of the United States in the world.

1. UNITED STATES strategy today is not well equipped to deal with problems of limited aggression. We accept the view that the essential deterrent to all-out Soviet attack is the conviction that such attack would provoke a general war with the United States. But there are degrees of Soviet pressure short of open military aggression; and to this form of limited aggression—such as satellite guerilla warfare or "revolution" instigated from outside—the United States may have no effective response except an atomic war. This condition may invite the extension of techniques of guerilla warfare and internal revolt in marginal areas in the confidence that such local activity would incur only local risks.

2. The predominant reliance by the United States on atomic warfare may weaken the morale and confidence of our European allies. Unless we have substantial ground, naval and tactical air forces available to supply immediate help in the event of Soviet aggression, our allies may be the less disposed to make the necessary efforts and sacrifices to prepare for such an ordeal. Yet their present strength and their will to resist are important elements among the factors which can deter Russian aggression and avert war. Anything that weakens the will to resist of our allies therefore jeopardizes the peace we are striving to maintain.

3. The present reliance by the United States on the threat of the bomb is continuing indication to the world that American military strategy accepts the principle of mass destruction of human life. This can only lead to a damaging misconstruction of American motives and character and to resentment of American power. It has already contributed to the conviction that the United States is a dangerous ally and has strengthened the search for neutrality or some other form of immunity as between the United States and Russia.

4. TO THE EXTENT that the United States has placed extensive reliance on the bomb, it has become more difficult for the United States to accept agreement restricting the use of atomic weapons. Such an agreement today would, in effect, constitute unilateral disarmament. To the degree that it has liberated its own defense strategy from its present central commitment to atomic weapons, the United States will be the more free to press for international control of atomic energy as part of a general system of disarmament. In the meantime, if control of atomic energy, with genuine inspection and safeguards is impossible, the United States has no alternative but to continue to build up its atomic strength; for the certainty of retaliation is probably the major deterrent to atomic warfare.

5. The peacetime defects of our present strategy are matched by equally serious defects in time of war. There may be the hope, however faint, that in case of war both sides may hesitate to initiate the use of atomic weapons, through fear of the inevitable retaliation. But there is not the slightest ground for hope that mutual fear may thus spare the world if either side is dependent on atomic weapons as its main instrument of war.

ATOMIC WAR has no clear limits. If the battle should be joined in western Europe, the Red army could be subjected to direct atomic attack only at the expense of blotting out the people and the cultural heritage which the North Atlantic Pact has committed us to defend.

The employment of the bomb on Russian soil, whatever its immediate military advantages, would complicate vastly any postwar rehabilitation of the Russian nation. And, now that the bomb is no longer a United States monopoly, Americans must recognize their own exceptional vulnerability to this weapon. Our population and our industry are highly concentrated; our main cities are easily accessible by air and water; we are dependent on intricate and fragile systems of communication and transport; and as a people, we are not accustomed to the shock of military catastrophe.

Moreover, where our vulnerability is relatively great, that of Britain is virtually total. An atomic war would almost certainly result in the obliteration of our closest ally. It is one of the tragic contradictions of our time that American strategy has organized the science and technology of the Nation around weapons, which, when imitated abroad, are potentially most dangerous to itself and its friends.

From the standpoint of its desire to achieve moral leadership in world affairs, the United States can ill afford a strategy which commits it in advance to warfare of mass slaughter on both sides—which might doom it to the fearful choice between world-wide mass destruction, on the one hand, and outright military defeat, on the other.

THE EMPHASIS on the weakness of the present strategy is justified if only to stimulate the search for alternatives. We assume that responsible members of our military establishment have this problem constantly in mind; but, inasmuch as military decisions must be circumscribed by political considerations, we believe that the problem will benefit from public discussion. It seems clear that important alternatives have so far been set aside not on their merits, but because of the strategic commitment to and the popular faith in atomic weapons. The danger of exclusive or even predominant reliance on the atomic alternative must now be clear.

The question of the kind of conventional military force which would supplement the bomb as a deterrent is one the American people must now face. The development of an adequate ground Army, the strengthening of our tactical air wing, the supply and logistic components, including the provision for air transport, the development of antisubmarine and other specialized naval forces, the use of the draft—all these problems pose questions not easily answered. But these questions, we believe, must be answered if United States policy is to be liberated from its present overwhelming dependence upon atomic warfare. We call upon our political and military leaders to explore these issues with the American people.

Egg of the week

One egg! When it's gone there won't be another for seven days. That's the way it is in rationed England. It's worse in Norway, Poland, Okinawa and other war-ravaged areas.

Hunger is ever-present—starvation only a little way off.

That's why CARE packages are important. Often CARE spells the difference between a stomach that is merely empty, and actual malnutrition. Without CARE entire families would be weakened targets for disease.

Each CARE package you furnish provides strength-giving food or badly needed blankets and clothes for a family far less fortunate than yours. When you contribute through CARE, you get a signed receipt, or your money back.

Pick the family or national you want to help. Or let CARE do it for you from its "neediest" files. Give now and give regularly. Just make check or money order payable to CARE. 6 Long-Time U. S. Workers Are Retired

Half century ago a farm lad near Craighead, Pa., angered and bewildered by the devastation caused forest land by insect pests, determined to find means of combating them.

Last Monday, the boy—now a man and an internationally known forest entomologist—Dr. Frank C. Craighead, retired from the Agriculture Department after nearly 27 years in charge of the department's investigations on forest insects.

D. E. Parker, assistant leader of the division of forest insect investigations, is acting in charge pending appointment of a successor to Dr. Craighead.

Dr. Craighead entered Federal service in 1910 as a temporary forest guard in the Forest Service. He holds a B. S. degree in forestry and biology from Pennsylvania State College and an M. S. and Ph.D. from George Washington University.

He and his associates in the division, together with cooperating entomologists, are credited with developing nearly every major advance in the control of insect plagues in the forest. They pioneered in the use of aircraft and DDT sprays for this purpose, according to the Agriculture Department.

A book, "Insect Enemies of Eastern Forests," prepared under Dr. Craighead's supervision, pointed up the alarming fact that about 200 million dollars worth of lumber are lost each year to insect pests alone.

Rear Adm. Anderson To Join Chicago Firm

Rear Admiral Charles C. Anderson, industrial manager of the Ninth Naval District since June, 1949, has retired from the service after 34 years of active duty.

A native of Bellingham, Wash., and a graduate of the United States Naval Academy, Admiral Anderson was experienced as a submarine man and a balloon pilot in addition to other qualifications.

At the outbreak of World War II, Admiral Anderson was in command of the USS Stratford then operating out of Reykjavik, Iceland.

After a short period in the Bureau of Ships here, he assumed command of the attack transport USS Frederick Funston.

This vessel participated in the operations at Saipan, Guam, Leyte, Lingayen Gulf and Iwo Jima.

Admiral Anderson's son, Marine Sergt. Charles Anderson, died aboard the Funston, while his father was in command, from wounds received at Iwo Jima.

Admiral Anderson received the Legion of Merit for "his outstanding leadership and courage" during combat in the Pacific.

J. S. Hawley, Official To Chief of Bureau

John Roy Cohran, assistant to the chief of the Bureau of Animal Industry, Agriculture Department, has retired after 45 years of service with the department.

Cohran, a native of Kentucky, entered the bureau in 1905 as a clerk. He became business manager January 1, 1946.

Coworkers noted Cochran's interest in encouraging newcomers in the lower brackets of Government service, and through the years many youths whom he had counseled returned to express gratitude.

Cohran, who lives at 917 18th st. nw., plans a period of travel, including visits to sisters in Kentucky and Florida.

J. S. Hawley, Officail In Bureau of Safety

Availing himself of the optional features of the Federal employe retirement law, James S. Hawley, assistant director of the Bureau of Safety, Interstate Commerce Commission, has ended his duties with the commission.

Born in Hawleyville, Conn., Hawley went to work for the New Haven Railroad and eventually became chief dispatcher.

He joined the Bureau of Safety as inspector of hours of service in 1912 and was made assistant director in 1939.

During the First World War, he served overseas as a major with the 14th Engineers, a railroad regiment. He is active in the Boy Scout movement and other youth affairs. Hawley lives at 2716 Wisconsin ave. nw.

R. S. Booth, Inspetcor Of Safety Appliances

Robert S. Booth, inspector of safety appliances, Bureau of Safety, Interstate Commerce Commission, has retired from Government service.

A native of Richmond, Va., Booth's first job was in the railroad industry. In 1919 he joined the commission as a locomotive inspector in the Bureau of Locomotive Inspection. He joined the Bureau of Safety in 1946. Booth will reside in Lenoir, N. C.

Top Federal Job List Draws Strong Protest From Cabinet Members

The top 400-job list yesterday took a new turn, with these developments:

1. A Cabinet member is threatening not to carry out Civil Service allocations of his employes to the top three grades, and he's charging the commission manhandled the classification job.

2. A second Cabinet member has written the commission a sizzling letter to lambaste it on its most vulnerable position—that he wasn't consulted by the commission on which of his employes should be placed in the three new grades.

3. A third cabinet member has demanded the commission review the cases of five of his employes.

4. And finally, but perhaps the most important, several key Civil Service officials are privately unhappy over the way the 400 list was handled. They won't say so publicly, but they agree the agency heads should have been consulted on the jobs to be included in the top grades.

"We consult with Grade 5 supervisors before we reclassify jobs under them," one official said, "and why we should have ignored agency heads on jobs vital to them is something beyond me."

Meantime, more agency heads are preparing to blast the list. They are ignoring the word from Civil Service that it will do no good to appeal cases since there are only 400 top jobs and they have all been filled. Despite the scorching criticism, everyone agrees the commission had an impossible job in selecting the "elite 400."

STORY: Naturally enough, a good many people were late for work yesterday as this city finally went on fast time. Most employes were excused, but one at Census was not. This is the story on him:

He reminded his coworkers on Wednesday evening to be sure to report for work an hour earlier the next morning. At starting time yesterday everyone had reported in the particular office—except the "cautious" one.

He showed up 45 minutes later with this lame excuse: "I didn't know we were on daylight time already."

OHE: This rent control agency will fold up and its 3000 employes will be jobless three weeks from today unless Congress provides more money in the meantime. It has barely enough money to carry through to May 26. The odds are about even for a last-minute reprieve by Congress.

PEOPLE: Two of Civil Service's top staff members are in the hospital, Charles Anderson, chief of the veterans unit, and John Overholt, chief of the efficiency rating section . . . Archie Palmer of the National Academy of Science and a former college president, will be appointed chairman of the patent policy board to decide how inventions by Federal workers are to be handled . . . At Postoffice, Thomas P. Bomar has been promoted to district superintendent-at-large of the postal transportation service . . . Mrs. J. Atwood Maulding, Interior personnel director, will speak Saturday at 2 p. m. at a meeting of the National Association of Retired Employes in the National History Building.

LOYALTY: A total of 202 Federal workers have now been fired on loyalty grounds by the President's Loyalty Review Board.

Further statistics carried in the board's March report: 143 employes won appeals and they were ordered restored to their jobs by the board; 97 cases are in the process of appeal; 18 cases have been sent back to agency boards for further study, and 1028 employes left the Federal service while they were being investigated.

SPEECH: In a speech yesterday at San Francisco, Civil Service Commissioner Frances Perkins:

Rapped the Citizens Committee for the Hoover Report for using what she described as a "horror approach" in its publicity releases;

Warned that personnel management can be overdeveloped to the point where it defeats its own purpose, and that personnel procedures can become the modern version of "red tape," and,

Revealed the commission would only go part way with the Hoover proposal to transfer primary responsibility to the agencies for recruiting and examining of Federal workers.

Six Who Spurned Fear Prove Cancer Not Death Sentence

By Jack Lartz—The Washington Post

MESSAGE OF HOPE—Cancer can be cured. Otto Soos, 60, 6200 54th ave., Riverdale, Md., can attest to that. Miracle of technology has provided him with a mechanical larynx, and the miracle of human love displayed by his wife, Dora, has given him courage to live to use it. He was one of three persons who recorded a message for the American Cancer Society

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

Six persons who have learned to laugh at cancer got together last night.

Sitting in a broadcasting studio, they had their voices recorded in a double-barreled plea. For they were living proof that cancer can be cured. Each had cancer. Each still shows the signs. Each wanted people everywhere to know that cancer, if caught quickly enough, carries no automatic death sentence.

It did not for Otto Soos, whose wife Dora said, "We never stopped laughing. We didn't have time to be afraid." Yet Otto Soos, now 60, has no larnyx of his own. He speaks with the aid of an electric larnyx the couple found in Philadelphia.

"First one in Washington," Soos said, pressing his larnyx against his throat. Soos comes from North Dakota, his wife from Iowa. For the past 10 years they have been living at 6200 54th ave., Riverdale, Md.

Before Soos found he had cancer, three years ago, they operated an automobile shop and gas station. They sold that. Now Mrs. Soos runs a postoffice substation. Soos, who is a mechanic, works "off and on." They'd like to get back in business again.

It was not a death sentence, either, for Mrs. Lelah Rodenberger, of 1250 11th st. se. Mrs. Rodenberger remembers that the doctors called her a hopeless cancer case six years ago. She wasn't afraid, but the doctors gave her no hope, she said.

A pathologist reported the cancer was "growing like wild-fire." For three years, Mrs. Rodenberger lived on. By 1947, she was still a long shot—but the odds were coming down.

Surgeons played the odds. An operation showed that the cancer, which had been spreading tentacles like an octopus, was "cornered." It was drying up.

Mrs. Rodenberger has "burned insides" from all the X-ray, and when she touches herself, she hurts. But she is alive. "I feel good. I never tire. And it's fun to be alive. People don't need to be afraid of cancer." It hasn't stopped her from going back to an active life at work in the transportation section of the General Accounting Office.

Each had his story—each his message of hope. Miss Margaret Gillespie, of 916 16th st. nw., who hopes to go back in business, now recovering from cancer of the mouth; Mrs. Helen Snowden, of 742 Kenilworth terr., happy to go on being a housewife; Manning D. Wallace of 411 Brewster ave., Silver Spring, who is working in the Riggs bank; and John S. Hopkins, of southeast Washington.

You will be hearing these people in recorded radio announcements. Logically enough, each is asking for contributions to the American Cancer Society.

Deadline Near For Poll Tax In Virginia

The deadline for payment of the 1950 Virginia poll tax as a requirement for voting in either the primaries or general election is midnight Saturday.

Virginians must be paid up on the annual $1.50 "capitation tax" for the past three years for voting eligibility this fall.

New residents who moved into Virginia within the past two years, however, must pay the annual tax only for those years in which they lived in the State.

Those recently turned 21 can vote without paying in the year in which they become of age.

The tax may be paid in person from 8:30 a. m. to 4:30 p. m. today at the treasurer's offices in the Arlington and Fairfax courthouses and at the Falls Church and Alexandria city halls.

In Arlington, Fairfax and Alexandria only, the treasurer's office will also be open from 8:30 a. m. to 1 p. m. Saturday. In Falls Church it will be open from 8:30 a. m. to 5 p. m. Saturday.

The commissioner of revenue offices will be open at the same time as the treasurer's offices in all four places.

The poll tax may be mailed up to midnight Saturday. Would-be voters should include $1.75. The Fairfax League of Women Voters is suggesting that $1.75 be mailed for each year, to take care of any penalties for delinquency.

To Two Months

Judges Cut Grand Jury Terms Here

The District Court judges yesterday lopped a month off the standard term for grand juries here, ordering two-month terms starting July 1.

Chief Judge Bolitha J. Laws pointed out that of all Federal jurisdictions where grand jurors are required to sit each weekday of their term, only in Washington did they remain on duty for as long as three months.

He said that until recent years, grand jurors here were able to dispatch their court business in morning sessions but now, because of the increased business, they must continue their deliberations well into the afternoon.

In another action, the judges decided to step up their summer court schedule.

This summer contested motions will be tried each work day. Criminal trials will be held each month, except for August. As in other years, a judge will be available at all times for emergency matters.

Johnston to Talk Here

Eric A. Johnston, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, will address the Unitarian Laymen's League at All Souls' Church, 16th and Harvard sts. nw., tonight at 6:30.

A Good Time on Fast Time Reported on Changeover Here

The District basked in a bright sun—the first in two days—during an extra hour of daylight yesterday, thanks to a belated switch to fast time.

The changeover wasn't too difficult, in general.

At one school, several pupils complained they "forgot" to advance their clocks before turning in Wednesday night.

"There may have been others," said a staff member, "but they were probably too ashamed to use that as an excuse."

The publicity attendant to legislative haranguing over the change may have had something to do with reports from Government agencies that tardiness was little more noticeable than usual.

At Union Station, where trains come and go on Eastern Standard Time while many passengers eat and sleep on daylight time, there were "very few complaints and missed trains," according to one official.

General Services Administration managed to reset about 23,000 clocks in Federal agencies, while Western Union published a directive outlining a clock-setting procedure that "shall be followed."

"You may take pride in the accuracy of your Western Union clock—it is not affected by electric power interruptions," said the notice.

At the 5 o'clock whistle, playgrounds, golf courses and tennis courts became suddenly populated. There were at least two hours left for recreation in daylight.

Quinn Case Due to Go to Jury Today

Gambling Trial Prosecutor Says Barber's Place Run Like Stock Broker's

The Government charged yesterday that three men on trial in District Court ran a backroom bookie joint at Barber's Newsstand as efficiently as a "stock broker's" office.

The jury which will receive the case today was told by the Government to find the men guilty of setting up a gaming table for racing bets at the 427 10th st. nw. newsstand.

The defendants are John L. Quinn, 4308 2d rd. N., Arlington; his brother, William V. Quinn, and Thomas B. White, 1104 N. Quincy st., Arlington.

In final argument, Defense Attorney Edward Bennett Williams attacked the testimony of Wilfred D. Barrett, a Columbus University student who acted as the undercoverman in the case.

Described Backroom

On the witness stand, Barrett had described the "backroom" minutely as a typical bookie shop with men milling around, the radio blaring, telephones ringing, and bets being made and paid.

Barrett also retracted certain statements he made in an affidavit on which the arrest warrants in the case were issued.

Williams pointed to the affidavit as saying that White was blonde, 5 feet 6, and weighed 135 pounds. In fact, said Williams, White is white-haired, 5 feet 2 and weighs 95 pounds.

Barrett also said in the affidavit that on January 7 he placed a bet with John Quinn on two certain horses. On the witness stand, Barrett admitted that he was in error, that the horses he mentioned had run on a different day.

Called "Big" Establishment

For the Government, Assistant United States Attorney William P. Arnold said that in the "backroom," as in a brokerage office, John Quinn was the deskman, William Quinn was the counterman, and White the boardboy.

Arnold called the place a "big gambling establishment" and said the defendants are "professional gamblers."

The defendants all admitted being in Barber's at various times but said they came there like "everybody on 10th st." to place bets on the horses.

3-Way Fight On Against River Pollution

Three nearby Virginia communities, facing identical pollution problems, have gone their separate ways in an effort to abate the nuisance, the Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin was told yesterday.

Representatives from Alexandria, Arlington and Fairfax cited the progress of their anti-pollution efforts in a round-table discussion which highlighted the first day of the commission's two-day spring meeting at the George Mason Hotel, in Alexandria.

Spokesmen from the three communities agreed on the desirability of joint study which might pave the way for a mutual solution of the problem, in giving this summary of their own action:

1. Fairfax County expects to start work within 30 days on a three-million-dollar program including a sewage disposal plant.

2. Arlington County is planning to expand its present plant for partial treatment of sewage, to meet demands resulting from the county's population growth, but has made no arrangements to finance the project.

3. Alexandria, which has had "plans and specifications" for a sewage-treatment plant for two years, has taken no steps to execute the plans and is waiting on the outcome of an annexation suit which might alter the program.

The three spokesmen were James Corbalis, Fairfax County sanitary engineer; J. Maynard Magruder, Arlington County's State delegate, and Mayor Franklin P. Backus of Alexandria.

They gave their "progress reports" after W. T. Ellis, jr., chairman of the water supply and sanitation committee of the Northern Virginia Regional Planning Commission, urged the three communities to cooperate in a joint study of the sewage program. He advocated consideration of united action in solving the problem, or of a program under which all three would pump their sewage directly to the District's plant for treatment.

At last night's session of the commission, E. Blackburn Moore urged more rigid enforcement of the Virginia water control act.

Chairman of the Virginia State Water Control Board and speaker of the House of Delegates, Moore said: "There are areas known by the board to be in direct violation," he added that the board "would take forward steps to convince these communities not to delay any longer" their anti-pollution measures.

A Modern Miracle

Ricky and His Mother Learned Hard Way; The 'Slow' Child May Have a Hearing Loss

The Washington Post

Mothers must learn too

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

Ricky, age 2, would get out of bed in the middle of the night, turn on all the lights and walk around the house so silently his parents could not hear him.

At the dinner table when he wanted something he would only point.

His baffled mother, Mrs. Barbara Funk, would tell: "Say 'Milk,' Ricky! Say what you want."

But he wouldn't even say "Mama" or "Daddy." Just make a sort of jabbering noise. He wouldn't play with other children. Just sit, surrounded by his toys.

"You could scream at the top of your lungs," said Mrs. Funk, 3214 Varnum st., Mount Rainier, Md., "and he wouldn't move, wouldn't turn his head. He was, well, lifeless."

Doctors would tell Mrs. Funk that Ricky was just "slow" in coming along.

Finally, the mother was told: "Your boy is deaf. You'll have to enroll him in a school for deaf children."

Mrs. Funk, a pretty blond woman of 24, recalls that "for three days I went around in a daze. I couldn't talk myself. I was that shocked."

Then someone told her about the Washington Hearing Society. She took Rickey there.

Understanding teachers tried the boy out on whistles and drums, watching his face and eyes for signs he had heard. They gave him tests which measured his hearing precisely.

It was joyous news they told Mrs. Funk: "Your child has residual hearing."

Not "deaf" really. It was just that he had a very good reason for not saying "Milk" or "Mama." But he was too young to understand himself, much less tell the reason.

They taught Ricky to lip-read. They taught him to form words by holding up a toy dog and teaching him to form "dog" with his lips. They showed him how to hold his little fingers on his mother's throat and "feel" the sounds. It is a wondrous thing to see him do this.

Mother went to school, too, with Ricky. For mothers have to learn, too.

At the hospital, they took out Ricky's tonsils and adenoids. He was given radium treatments.

Today, four years old, he's still going to school at the society, 2431 14th st. nw.

But you never saw a more energetic and lively looking boy than Ricky was yesterday out at the society. Ar a happier mother than Mrs. Funk.

"I can call him and he'll turn around," says Mrs. Funk, in breathless wonder.

And Ricky loves to play with other children now. He plays cowboy. When the other children say "Hands up!" he watches their lips and says it back.

The story of Ricky and his mother was cited to show the importance of finding out early if children have hearing loss; the importance of the pre-school survey now being conducted by the society at nurseries here. For the earlier the training starts, the better.

"If we had only known about these things," said Mrs. Funk. "We lost a whole year."

Besides the Saturday morning classes they now attend, Ricky and his mother will go to the summer demonstration class July 6 to August 3 at the society. The course costs $25, but scholarships will be sought for those who can't afford the fee, said Mrs. Ruth Hudnut, executive director.

The Washington Hearing Society will present a program on May 9 at the Washington Gas Light Auditorium in connection with National Hearing Week.

One of the topics is "You're Never Too Young to Begin." This is a fact that Ricky and his mother have happily learned.

Jury Due to Get Ambrose Case Next Week

The "get-rich-quick" $600,000 stamp scheme of Harold F. Ambrose, former Postoffice Department official, is expected to go before a Federal grand jury next week, the Justice Department disclosed last night.

The case will be presented by Assistant United States Attorney John W. Fihelly who said yesterday he and his staff were "still familiarizing ourselves with the story" in conferences with postal inspectors who conducted a two-month investigation.

Ambrose, a special assistant to Postmaster General Jesse W. Donaldson, was ousted January 11 after his stamp operations were disclosed.

Donaldson turned over the postal investigative report also to the criminal division of the Justice Department whose attorneys may assist in the grand jury presentation.

The Postmaster General said he had learned Ambrose had been handling a large-scale commemorative stamp investment plan and that operations over an 18-month period ran to around $600,000.

The Ambrose plan was based on the assumed rise in value of the stamps after they had been bought. Donaldson said about 25 persons had been persuaded to invest in the special stamp issues, but said the quick profits did not come through and seven of the investors were "left holding the bag" for about $200,000.

Postal inspectors who worked on the Ambrose case said they did not uncover any violation of Federal law

Man's Body Found Floating in River Off Hains Point

Harbor police recovered the body of an unidentified white man from the Washington Channel—off the tea house at Hains Point—early last night.

Police said he was 35 to 40 years old, about 5 feet 10 inches tall, and weighed about 145 pounds. They said he was wearing a gray suit and white shirt, black and white tie, and black shoes. His hair was black.

Police hoped to identify him through laundry marks. There was no wallet, although $40 was found in the pockets of the dead man.

$20,000 D. C. Crime Probe Approved

A $20,000 fund to continue activities of the House District Crime Investigating Subcommittee was approved yesterday by the House Accounts Subcommittee.

The action was announced by Representative Thomas B. Stanley (D., Va.), chairman of the accounts group.

He said the next move would be to present the funds request to the House Administration Committee at its next meeting Wednesday.

The fund was requested by Representative James C. Davis (D., Ga.) chairman of the special District crime investigating group.

Davis declined to comment on the Accounts Committee action. The money is to be used, according to previously announced plans, to carry out preparation of a program for stricter Washington law enforcement at many points where the subcommittee believes there are weaknesses.

Whether the additional funds might lead to further hearings on the Washington crime and law enforcement picture has not been disclosed.

Bar to Admit Young Lawyers Here Today

Attorneys who passed the December bar examinations will be admitted to practice before the bar of the District of Columbia today.

A special luncheon honoring the new lawyers will be given by the Junior Bar Association at 12:15 p. m. at the Hamilton Hotel. The luncheon will be addressed by District Judge James R. Kirkland and John L. Laskey, president of the Bar Association of the District.

Service Is Set To Honor Dead In Two Wars

The 1500 District men and women who died in the two World Wars will be honored Sunday at services at the District World War Memorial in West Potomac Park.

Principal speaker at the 4 p. m. services will be Representative John E. Rankin (D., Miss.), chairman of the House Veterans Affairs Committee.

Some 34 patriotic organizations will participate, many of them laying wreaths at the foot of the memorial. A wreath honoring the late Frank B Noyes, president of The Evening Star Newspaper Co. and chairman of the memorial's founding commission, will be placed by Col. Julius I. Peyser, past department commander of the American Legion.

At 3:30 p. m., preceding the regular program, a tree will be dedicated to the memory of Police Lieut. Horace W. Lineburg, once department commander of the American Legion. Department Comdr. Charles K. Dunn and all past commanders will participate in the dedication.

The United States Marine Band, under the direction of Maj. William F. Santelmann, will give a half-hour concert. Miss Hilda Nelson will sing.

Hearing of gambling charges against 21 men arrested April 29 during a dice game in Colmar Manor was continued in Hyattsville Police Court yesterday until May 18.

The arrests followed a raid by county police on quarters above the Romano Inn, 3705 Bladensburg rd., Colmar Manor.

Reed Mental Patient Seized After Chase on Jap Bike

A 17-year-old escaped mental patient from Walter Reed Hospital was captured by police yesterday afternoon after he broke into a physician's garage.

The youth was surprised, police said, while he was tampering with an auto in the garage of Dr. Darrell C. Crain, 2744 Brandywine st. nw.

Mrs. Crain, spotting him, called police. Meantime, the Army patient fled on a bicycle police believe he had stolen earlier.

Where he had obtained the bike, police don't know. It was made in Japan.

Detectives E. A. Sadler and W. G. Schillig arrested him at Tilden st. and Broad Branch rd. nw.

Dressed in a maroon hospital uniform, he escaped from the hospital at 10:30 a. m. and was arrested about four hours later.

Hospital Aid Allotments Of $975,776 Approved

Funds to Be Used On Matching Basis With U. S. Money For Construction

District Commissioners yesterday approved tentative allocations totalling $975,776 in Hill-Burton Act funds for hospital construction in the District during the next two years.

Henry S. Gavens, budget and administrative officer of the District Health Department, said the allocations were made on the assumption that Congress will appropriate $150 million for a two-year period starting July 1. A bill now pending in the House calls for only $75 million, Gavens said, but it is hoped it will be doubled.

To the extent that funds are available, the act authorizes grants to communities for hospital construction on the matching basis of one Federal dollar to two dollars raised in the community.

Gavens said the following allocations were approved on the recommendation of the Hospital Advisory Council:

Children's Hospital — $180,981 (of which $59,981 was approved but not available in the last three-year period) for construction of a 90-bed building with kitchen and laundry facilities to serve the entire hospital.

Casualty Hospital—$200,000 for a 92-bed building that will replace an old building of about 45 beds.

Warwick Memorial Clinic—$150,000 for a new clinic at Washington Circle near George Washington University Hospital. The clinic is now at 13th and H sts. nw.

The remaining $444,795 would go to the District Government. Gavens said specific items it would be used for have not yet been determined.

Dupont Pass Open Today To Traffic

Dupont Circle underpass will be opened to traffic today at 9:30 a. m.

This was announced yesterday by District Highway Director J. N. Robertson after a final inspection of the $4,750,000 project that has been 26 months in the making. The official dedication ceremony will be held at noon May 16.

To restore the normal traffic pattern in the area, two streets near the circle will revert to previous normal usage with the opening. Wallace L. Braun, deputy director of vehicles and traffic, said these changes will be made:

1. N st., which has been one way east near Connecticut ave. during construction, will remain one way east from Connecticut ave. to 16th st. But it will be one way west from Connecticut ave. to 22d st.

2. Eighteenth st., which has been limited to northbound traffic, between Connecticut ave. and S st., will become a two-way street again.

In about a week when all buses have been rerouted, 21st st. will change back from one-way south to one-way north, Braun said.

A Capital Transit Co. spokesman also announced two changes in bus routes today at 9:30 a. m. They are the G-2 (P st.) and N-2 (Massachusetts ave.) lines that had been by-passing the circle on N st. Starting today eastbound runs will go around the circle, though westbound routes will remain unchanged for the present.

Two new stops were announced for each of the routes. For the G-2 line, they will be on P st. at 20th and 18th sts. For N-2 buses, they will be on Massachusetts ave. west of 20th st. and on Connecticut ave. north of N st.

Wages Bill Opposed By Employer Groups

A labor-sponsored bill for standard methods of paying wages in the District met sharp opposition from employer groups in a Senate District Committee hearing yesterday.

Some of the employer groups opposed the bill's provisions. Others asked to be exempted from it. Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West said the District Commissioners had no opinion on applying the bill to private industry, but felt the District and Federal Governments should be exempted.

A major aim of the bill is to require payment of wages in the District at least twice a month, and to make paydays come within three days of the end of the regular pay period.

Lag of Seven Days

For District Government employes, the lag between the end of the pay period and payday is now seven days, say officials. They estimated it would require doubling the staff assigned to payroll work to comply with the bill.

Testifying for the bill, Walter J. Mason, AFL legislative representative, said similar laws are in force in 46 States to insure workers prompt payment of their wages.

Miss Beatrice McConnell, of the Federal Bureau of Labor Standards, said the United States Labor Department "is convinced that legislation (like the proposed bill) is necessary to protect wage earners and their families from those employers who fail to pay wages regularly, or who do not pay in full or do not pay at all."

O'Connor Backs Bill

Others speaking for the bill included Frank O'Connor, secretary of the Building Trades Council, and Charles E. Sands, of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes International Alliance.

A. Julian Brylawski of the Washington Board of Trade said that organization is opposed to the bill. "It is apparently designed to safeguard wages earned by employes of itinerant or "fly-by-night" employers . . . but it seems clear that these amount to a fraction of 1 percent of the District's overall payroll of more than 500 million dollars."

Stricken on Street

Wm. R. Benet, Poet, Dies In New York

New York, May 4 (AP).—William Rose Benet, Pulitzer Prize-winning poet and widely known editor, collapsed in the street tonight and died a few minutes later. He was 64.

A brother of the late Stephen Vincent Benet, also a Pulitzer Prize poet, Benet was the husband of Elinor Wylie, the poet and novelist who died in 1928.

Benet was striken at Broadway and 155th street after attending a meeting of the Council of the National Institute of Arts and Letters nearby. A police report said death was due to natural causes.

A graduate of Yale, Benet served in the Air Force during World War 1. For many years he was associated with the Saturday Review of Literature and other magazines as an editor and critic.

He received the Pulitzer prize in 1942 for his autobiographical verse narrative "The Dust Which is God." His other books include "Merchants of Cathay," "The Falconer of God," and "Moons of Grandeur."

He also was the author of a play, "Day's End."

A self-described liberal, Benet was a member of the Civil Rights Defense Committee, an organization devoted to preserving civil liberties. He was associated in this work with the philosopher, John Dewey, and the writers, John Dos Passos and Waldo Frank, among others.

LONDON, May 4 (AP).—King George VI and Queen Elizabeth had 2000 guests for tea at Buckingham Palace today in the first royal presentation party of the season. A United States contingent of more than 150 will be presented in the great main ballroom next Wednesday.

Only a few of those present today met the King and Queen personally. There was that much of a crush.

Anybody Can Farm? Bosh!

The most disastrous thing that ever happened to this country is the idea that anybody can farm, Novelist and Farmer Louis Bromfield said yesterday.

Speaking to a luncheon audience of the Woman's National Farm and Garden Association, Capital Division, Bromfield explained that 10 percent of United States farmers feed 50 percent of the population.

Another 30 percent, who are not so competent, feed the rest of the population. The remaining 60 percent of our farmers produce little more than they consume.

When scientifically educated farmers replace poor farmers, we can do away with agricultural subsidies, he said.

But "until the liquidation of the bad farmer we must shore up the economy."

Bromfield, whose recent books have been about modern agricultural methods used on his own Malabar Farm, discoveries which show that "nature will take care of things if she is not interfered with."

Hens permitted to feed themselves "cafeteria style" suffered no dietary deficiencies, whereas hens fed carefully prepared mash often did, for example.

Jewish Appeal Gift Luncheon Nets $135,000

In half an hour yesterday, about 800 women pledged more than $135,000 to the United Jewish Appeal.

The occasion was the "$100 minimum gift" luncheon given at the Mayflower Hotel by the Women's Division of the appeal, with Representative Franklin D. Roosevelt as guest speaker.

In his plea for more funds for Israel young Roosevelt warned that in perhaps six months, many of the displaced persons now awaiting transportation from central European countries to Israel might not be able to leave.

"We can't ask them to wait because we haven't given enough money," he stated. "Soon, it will be too late."

Congressman Roosevelt, chairman of the National Christian Division of the UJA, pointed out that displaced persons no longer are permitted to leave Romania, Poland or Russia while just a few can immigrate from Czechoslovakia. He added that restrictions are tightening.

"We can't gamble with those human lives," he declared.

The young Democrat also told of his recent trip to Israel, when he visited hospitals and the camps of new Israeli citizens for whom there was no housing.

As he described the hardships there, tears came into the eyes of many in the audience.

In a lighter vein, Representative Roosevelt said he might have to open "The Roosevelt School of Hebrew." Most of his acquaintances in New York's West Side, he explained couldn't pronounce correctly the names of Jewish cities and persons Following Roosevelt's talk Mrs. Barbara Lawrence, chairman of International Women's Clubs, told of her trip last fall to North Africa and Southern France, where she visited settlements of Jews awaiting passage to Israel.

Then the money pledging began. Each guest was obligated to donate at least $100 to the UJA at the luncheon but the average donation came to a considerably higher sum.

Pakistan's 1st Lady Is Dynamic Leader

By Elizabeth Maguire

IN PAKISTAN, things have been begun by the Begum.

Women of the Islamic faith have had privileges such as divorce and inheritance for 1400 years but it is just recently they have taken active part in civic affairs. Now Begum Liaquat Ali, wife of the Prime Minister of Pakistan, is heading a woman's organization which numbers some 5000.

This is a record membership, for it is only since partition of India about 2½ years ago that Moslem women have entered into public life in any great numbers.

The beautiful Begum told women of the American press yesterday about the women of her country, in an interview at Prospect House where she and her husband are staying as guests of the United States.

Quick-witted and gracious, the Begum discussed marriage customs, fashions, and feminine finances of Pakistan with equal ease. Her own marriage was a love match, she said, although most marriages in Pakistan are arranged by the mother of the bride.

She credits her marriage to the fact that she had struck out on a career, as school teacher, so, had more freedom to choose for herself. "I heard Mr. Ali Khan give a speech in the assembly and that got me," she said.

Although her romance worked out, she believes there's a lot to be said for arranged marriages—"I have seen so many love marriages go bust," she explains. In Pakistan, the mother chooses her daughter's husband, and the daughter usually gives her consent. Without the daughter's consent, however, the marriage does not take place.

Mother Holds Power

THE MOTHER of the family thus has great power, and she holds the purse strings as well, as the husband is accustomed to giving her the management of family earnings.

Moslem law permits a man to have more than one wife, but this is not a general practice, according to the Begum. "As a rule, men can't afford but one," she explained succinctly.

Asked if she thought American fashions would influence fashions of Pakistan, she replied, "I think we will influence you. When I go to New York, I hope they will make your country women some gararas, kurtas, and dupattas."

The garara she stood up to illustrate is a full pair of trousers, which look like a skirt on the wearer. The kurta is a tunic and the dupatta a veil. Stacked against everyday tweeds and tailored frocks, her costume—of lime green chiffon—did look enchanting.

Strife Led to Progress

ALTHOUGH she prefers the traditional styles of her own country, the Begum is sympathetic to many Western ideas—particularly to those which improve woman's status. She believes that the emancipation of Moslem women from their traditional seclusion was delayed by the 90-odd years of British rule.

"Purdah," the Moslem custom of secluding women, was generally adhered to until the partition of India. The Begum believes that her country turned its back on Western ideas introduced by the British as a way of preserving its independence of spirit.

Ironically, the civil strife which followed partition was responsible for woman's progress, the Begum pointed out. When seven million Moslem refugees from other parts of India began pouring into Pakistan, the streets were littered with sick and wounded. In this great national emergency, the women put aside their veils and went to work. For the first time, they studied nursing and social welfare—activities now sponsored by the organization the Begum directs.

"Our women are also very keen on rifle drill," she went on to say. "Simply for self-preservation. Some 60,000 women were abducted at the time of the partition. They had never been outside of the home, and they were just taken away at that time and have never been heard from."

Now the Begum is interested in organizing cottage industries in her country. These include hand workmanship of silver, wood, copper, embroidery, weaving and textiles. The work is done mostly by women, and without some sort of workable organization, the products cannot be marketed on a large scale.

Told she was called "the Mrs. Roosevelt of Pakistan," the Begum laughed, "But I'm afraid I am not half as brilliant as she is. I have already met her in Paris, and she impressed me a lot."

ARCHIVES DEPT.—Some dismay was registered in the baseball world a couple of months ago when the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt's personal papers were opened to the public at the dedication of the Hyde Park museum, and it was reported that FDR's famous "green-light" letter to baseball during the war was not among them.

POVICH

Now it is revealed that those reports were in error, and by no less than Wayne C. Grover, Archivist of the United States, who says Roosevelt's letter to the late Commissioner Landis was included in the personal papers. He forwards photostats to this bureau.

The photostats are interesting in that for the first time they reveal Landis' letter to Roosevelt requesting the green light, following Pearl Harbor, when it was feared baseball would have to suspend operations.

And I quote, from Landis, who addressed Roosevelt in long-hand, like this: "Dear Mr. President. The time is approaching when, in ordinary conditions our teams would be leaving for spring training camps. However, inasmuch as these are not ordinary times, I venture to ask what you have in mind as to whether professional baseball should continue to operate.

"Of course, my inquiry does not relate at all to individual members of this organization whose status in this emergency is fixed by law operating upon all citizens.

"Normally, we have in addition to 16 major league teams, approximately 320 minor teams—members of leagues playing in the United States and Canada. Health and strength to you—and whatever else it takes to do this job. With great respect, Very truly yours, Kenesaw Mountain Landis."

FIGHT DEPT.—Mike Jacobs' prediction, a few years back, that the prize fight business would shrink to studio productions for television audiences, was fulfilled at Uline Arena the other night. Only 389 customers anted up for Goldie Ahearn's show, yet everybody was paid off out of the television receipts.

As for the paying customers, "Who's counting?" asks Ahearn happily. "Anyway, counting relatives, I had about a thousand people in the house." Actually, Ahearn was counting ears, not noses, but with $3000 in television revenue stashed away, he made out nicely.

He's staging another show tonight, more or less strictly for television, which will bail him out again no matter how customers are in the house. He's tossing in Arthur King, who holds the grand-sounding title of lightweight champion of the British Empire, against Biff Jones, the local light, whose lights went out a couple of years back when he met Johnny Bratton.

King, though, owns one distinction. He crashed through the color line to become the first Negro ever allowed to fight for a title in England. He was supposed to meet Billy Thompson, a Britisher, for the title in Canada in 1948. Thompson went to Toronto for the fight, fled back to England when he learned King was colored. King paid his own expenses to London and badgered the British into approving a fight with Thompson, whom he knocked out in eight rounds.

TITLE DEPT.—A special medical board of the Illinois Athletic Commission has declared Heavyweight Champion Ezzard Charles "unfit for strenuous exercise at the present time." That decision was handed down after examination of what was reported to be a heart condition.

Up in Camden, N. J., Felix Bocchicchio, the manager of Jersey Joe Walcott, declares himself unsurprised at the N. B. A.'s decision that Charles has a bum ticker. "I could have told them months ago," said Bocchicchio, "that Charles was suffering. He won't give my man Walcott a return bout. I don't know what the doctors call it, but Charles' trouble is well known in fistic circles. He's fainthearted."

RED SOX DEPARTMENT—After winning six games in a row, the Red Sox significantly reaffirmed their decision to deny themselves to reporters until 30 minutes after their games. Apparently they were feeling quite expansive, after their sorry early-season start.

However, the Boston baseball-writing press is no longer annoyed by the Boston team's passion for privacy. "Before long," said one of the press-box spokesmen, "the Yankees will render our Red Sox non-news, and so we won't be losing any news sources."

Homer in 9th Wins for Bucs

Pittsburgh, May 4 (AP).—Home run by Third Baseman Nanny Fernandez in the ninth inning with two out and Ralph Kiner on base broke a tie and gave the Pittsburgh Pirates a 3-1 victory over the New York Giants today.

The only other Pittsburgh run, tying the score in the seventh, also came via a homer. Johnny Hopp hit it into the visitors' bullpen in left center.

Chisox Paste Yanks, 15-0, For Worst Shutout

New York, May 4 (AP).—The Chicago White Sox handed the World Champion New York Yankees an unmerciful 15-0 drubbing today.

Two pitchers—Lefty Ed Lopat and righthander Don Johnson—received the full charge of the White Sox onslaught, a total of 23 base hits. In the meantime, Bob Cain, rookie southpaw, stifled the Yanks with five hits, three of them by little Phil Rizzuto.

It was one of the most lopsided lickings for the Yankees in recent years and their biggest shutout loss in history.

LaMotta Beats Taylor Easily

Syracuse, N. Y., May 4 (AP).—Middleweight Champion Jake Lamotta of New York tonight won a unanimous 10-round decision over Joe Taylor of Binghamton, N. Y., after a rousing nontitle battle. A crowd of 6500 was on hand.

All officials had Jake winning 6 of the 10 rounds. The action was fast from bell to bell with but one or two clinches through the 30 minutes of brawling.

Bums Win, Lose Bankhead And Newcombe

Chicago, May 4 (AP).—The Brooklyn Dodgers overwhelmed the Chicago Cubs, 10-2, today but uncovered another sore arm case.

Dan Bankhead, making his first major league start in place of the ailing Don Newcombe, had to quit with two out in the Chicago half of the sixth inning.

Bankhead complained about his right shoulder a few minutes after the Brooklyn club announced that Newcombe had been sent home for a complete rest until May 13

Corum Won't Quit While Ahead, Picks Your Host to Win

New York, May 4 (AP).—Bill Corum, who picked the finish 1-2-3-4 last year, offers a "hunch bet" for the 76th Kentucky Derby Saturday. It's Your Host, the favorite.

"Of all the 75 previous winners only one—Lieutenant Gibson in 1900—had four white stockings. Your Host has four white stockings (white ankles)," said Corum.

"This is my first year as head of the Derby, of course. And the picture over my bed, hung there long before I came here, is the picture of the horse with four white feet, Lieutenant Gibson."

Lemon Snaps Bosox String At Six, 5 to 4

Ez Charles Unfit But NBA Won't Act for 90 Days

Chicago, May 4 (AP).—Ezzard Charles of Cincinnati is a heavyweight champion with an ailing heart and 90 days to mend it or possibly forfeit his crown.

Charles, who won the National Boxing Association version of Joe Louis' vacated title last June, today was adjudged by an Illinois State Athletic Association medical board to have "a vascular condition of the heart."

With Charles' ring future doubtful, the return of Louis to the now-jumbled heavyweight division appeared a possibility. Louis is a partner in the International Boxing Club which holds Charles' contract.

Browns Miss Shutout on Dente's 9th Inning Hit

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

The Nats had no one in their lineup who could produce a five-run homerun last night and this oversight cost then a 5-1 decision to the St. Louis Browns.

Dr. David Tracy, the Browns' club psychologist was among the 6609 Griffith Stadium observers, but it wasn't he who mesmerized the Nats. He didn't have to, what with Pitcher Joe Ostrowski having the situation well in his hand, his left hand.

The 28-year-old southpaw had a 2-hit shutout entering the ninth, but he tired a bit, permitting three singles in the last-ditch Washington offensive and these cost him his shutout.

It was the second straight victory for the Boston Red Sox cast-off in as many starts. In his previous outing, he subdued the Cleveland Indians by an identical score, but permitted them six hits, one more than the Nats could wangle out of him.

After Sam Dente had knocked in the lone Nats run in the ninth, it fazed Ostrowski not one wit that Gil Coan, who unloaded a grand slam homer Wednesday to beat the Browns, 4-3, was all set to pinch hit. Ostrowski got two strikes on Al Evans and on the next pitch, Evans sent a skidding grounder over second which Owen Friend neatly routed into a force play and the Nats' one-game winning streak was over.

Coan, as a result, didn't even get a chance to be a hero again.

The defeat dropped the Nats two notches in the standings, tumbling them from second place, which they owned at 8:30 last night, to fourth, their habitat approximately two hours later.

The Browns managed nine hits off three Washington pitchers. Ostrowski, himself, tied the Nats in scoring. He doubled in a run in the eighth off Lloyd Hittle and a moment later scored himself.

Weik Wild Again

Dick Weik started out for the Nats and quickly proved that his reputation as a wild pitcher is not entirely without foundation. He walked the first two Brownies he faced and they promptly became two runs. In the fourth inning, after he had issued his sixth walk, Weik was excused and Hittle summoned. Hittle stuck around until removed for a pinch hitter in the eighth and Joe Haynes pitched a scoreless ninth.

Until the ninth, only one wearer of the Washington colors had gotten as far as second base. Al Evans singled sharply to left in the fifth inning and it wasn't until two innings later that the Nats could dent Ostrowski for a second hit, this one coming off the bat of Clyde Vollmer, also to left field.

Shortstop Billy De Mars and outfielder Dick Kokos drew walks to launch Weik on his first loss in his first starting assignment of the young season. Each moved up a base as Evans allowed Weik's first pitch to Ray Coleman to elude him for a passed ball. Both runners scored as Coleman grounded out and Ken Wood followed with the first of his three hits.

The 2-0 Brownie lead lasted only till the fourth inning when it became 3-0. De Mars singled this one across after walks had set the run up.

Quiet for three innings, the Browns erupted again in the eighth off Hittle. Leo Thomas' single and Ostrowski's double to left center added up to one run and De Mars' second single boosted Ostrowski's lead to 5-0.

Irv Noren started the insipid rally which spoiled Ostrowski's shutout by singling to right in the ninth. With two away, Vollmer beat out a hit to third and then Dente came through with a single to right—his first hit in his last 21 times at bat—to score Noren. Sensing a real rally, the crowd hung around, but Evans sent them home unhappy about the whole evening, by forcing Dente.

Your Host No Beauty, But Derby Isn't Beauty Contest

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Louisville, Ky., May 4.—I was close to Your Host this morning—closer, in fact, than an army of West Coast backers expect his opposition to become Saturday.

Despite all reports, the Derby favorite isn't a bad looking horse. He probably wouldn't win a blue ribbon at a Meadowbrook Horse Show, but then the run for the roses isn't a beauty contest.

Much has been written about his wry neck and his habit of cocking his head on one side. We've been told of several accidents that caused the oddity. However, Trainer Harry Daniels says a mishap was not responsible.

Your Host's hermit-crab appearance is not confined to when running. He had the same peculiarity standing in front of his stall and walking around the barn shed.

Apparently, his "trouble"—and to date he doesn't seem to be hampered—is with his eyes. His left eye not only is smaller than the night but also is set lower in his head.

In order to get his sight on the level he cocks his head.

Add this list of his head to the fact that he has four white legs—supposed to stamp any horse as cheap—Your Host is a sort of outcast with those supposed to be able to judge the value of a horse with a passing glance.

While Owner William Goetz once was eager to rid himself of the "freak," he since has been thankful the Alibhai colt had that "nothing" look but for which he might today be a Derby favorite in different colors.

Goetz purchased Your Host as a yearling from his father-in-law, Louis B. Mayer, in one of the several sales that took the movie magnate out of the horse racing business. He bid in the colt for $20,000, also acquiring eight others for a total outlay of $106,000.

Believing himself overstocked with horseflesh, Goetz offered to sell any three for a blanket price of $20,000. Of course, one of the three could have been Your Host.

Several persons, who probably are knocking their heads against brick walls at this writing, registered mild interest but finally turned down the proposition.

In the meanwhile, Sherman Ringe, now training for Lou Costello at Garden State, began breaking the yearlings so Goetz decided he would string along with the whole bunch—a fortunate decision if there ever was one.

One scribe, observing Your Host's eyes closely, remarked, "all he needs is bifocals."

Derby Tries New Twist by Accepting Entries 24 Hours Earlier

Your Host, Five Others Officially 'In'

Louisville, Ky., May 4.—For the first time in the 76-year-old history of the Kentucky Derby a horse was officially in the entries before he had his final tune-up.

Your Host, slated for favoritism on Saturday, along with five other 3-year-olds became definite eligibles this morning when, in a surprise move, Racing Secretary Fred Burton accepted entries 24 hours in advance of the usual time.

In addition to Your Host, Burton's call was answered by Hill Prince, Oil Capitol, Black George, Stranded and Lotowhite.

This afternoon, Your Host worked over the drying out track, the last workout of a serious nature for any of the Derby horses.

The West Coast ace, with head cocked on the side as usual, went five furlongs in a minute flat in handy fashion, Your Host, however, had to play second fiddle to Mr. Trouble on the timer's watch. The Whitney colt took the track a few minutes later and stepped the five panels in .59-2/5. However, Mr. Trouble kept closer to the inside rail than the Derby favorite.

Despite the new entry twist, the field will not be locked up until the traditional hour of 10 a. m. tomorrow.

The innovation was thought to be tryout for next year's proposed plan to close the Derby entries two days in advance of the race. Bill Corum, who succeeded the late Col. Matt Winn as Mr. Derby, believes the early closing would add interest, since the publication of entries at that time would aid in the ballyhoo.

Black George, the surprise winner of the Derby Trial, was the first colt to be entered. Trainer Ray Barnett, making entries for tomorrow's program, also dropped Black George's Derby paper into the box. Barnett said Black George will start only if the track is muddy, the colt having won the Trial in that going.

Trainer Harry Daniels then stepped forward and made Your Host an official starter. He was followed by J. H. Hayes with the filled out form on Hill Prince. Later the handlers of the other three named their runners.

After almost a week of rain, indications now point to a fast track for Saturday. Today dawned hot and sultry and a strong wind came up in the afternoon, and the racing surface, termed "slow" as the Thursday program opened, was drying out rapidly. The forecast is for a clear weekend.

The almost certain group to be named tomorrow includes Middleground, On The Mark, Sunglow, Greek Ship, Mr. Trouble, Trumpet King, Hawley and Hallieboy.

Ben Jones, the Calumet trainer with five Derbies to his credit, holds out no hope that he will make it six. In front of barn 15 this morning, the veteran conditioner kicked accumulated mud off his shoes and said, "I can't see any reason to start Theory—he isn't horse enough. Didn't come up right for the Derby. I hoped he'd show me something in the Trial but he didn't. Instead of improving he's been backing up."

Scribes remembered that Jones had little good to say about Ponder as last year's Derby approached. However, this morning he registered what appeared to be real disgust that he did not have a contender in the barn.

The Derby has a rags-to-possible-riches angle. Walter Fugate insists that his Hallieboy will go to the post and is being stamped the most misplaced hunk of horseflesh since Jack Benny's Rochester started Burnt Cork.

Fugate, a "gyp" horseman, caught the Derby fever last Saturday when the colt ran second to Dimit, an older horse, at Lincoln Downs, R. I. He shipped the 3-year-old here in a van, the trip consuming 37 hours. Hallieboy appeared frisky, however, this morning and Fugate remarked, "He will be close enough at the finish to see what's going on."

A scribe grinned and Fugate said, "I wish you guys would quit feeling sorry for me."

Veteran Cuts Strokes with New Ball

"I've been playing golf for twenty years," writes an enthusiastic golfer from Evanston, Illinois, "and since using the Les Strokes ball, I have been able to stay in the 70's for the first time."

Les Strokes has everything needed to make it a score improver—click, distance, fast response, durability. That's because its new dynamic center has 70 times the usual amount of power-transmitting liquid. Wound with new F-239 vita-life thread that doesn't lose its bounce.

Compare it with the ball you have been using. You'll find Les Strokes will do for your game what it has done for others. On sale at golf shops throughout this district. The Worthington Ball Company, Elyria, Ohio World's largest exclusive golf ball maker since 1904.

DEAR FOLKS: AT PIMLICO.

There is a distinct Charles Town flavor at sedate Pimlico this spring, which was especially marked by the appearance of many riding favorites from the West Virginia plant in the fifth race today. A rundown through the race showed no less than 10 of the 12 riders hailing from the environs of Charles Town. Listed for action were Johnny Dickey, Nick Shuk, Ernie Wood, Sammy Palumbo, Joe Servis, Chuck Dorsey, Jimmy McDermott, John Cruz, Eddie Sanders and Buddy Root. In addition, many horses from Charles Town are proving a boon in filling the races at the Baltimore plant. The pump is the only Charles Town fixture missing and it is rumored that Leeds K. Riely is contemplating moving the pump—lock, stock and barrel—to Park Heights ave. See you on the rail.

Gene Sarazen Baffles Britisher With 'New PGA Agency' Here

(Editor's Note: This is another in a series of anecdotes about the colorful golf career of Gene Sarazen, who will appear in The Washington Post's National Celebrities Tournament June 3-4 at Army-Navy Country Club.)

By Gene Sarazen

LIKE EVERY MAN who spent considerable time in Washington during the hectic war years, I have my batch of stories about the wheels within the wheels of bureaucracy.

My favorite story concerns the evening before I left for the Professional Golfers Association championship, when I called my friend Bob Hannegan, then Postmaster General, to see if he were free for dinner. He was tied up for dinner at the British Embassy.

SARAZEN

"But wait a minute, Gene," he said. "Let me phone and find out if I can take you along as my guest." Five minutes later Bob told me that everything was all set, and we went to the embassy together.

After dinner, when the men were gathered in the smoking room, Lord Halifax, the British Ambassador, and I had a brief conversation. He asked me what I was doing in Washington.

"Oh, I'm just going to the PGA," I explained.

"The PGA?" Halifax asked. He wrinkled his forehead and seemed very puzzled. "The PGA," he repeated. "Well, that just goes to show you that no matter how closely you try to keep in touch with what's happening in Washington, the moment you turn your back the Government has created another agency."

—From "Thirty Years of Championship Golf," by Gene Sarazen, with Herbert Warren Wind, published by Prentice-Hall.

Wind Making Lobbyists of Coast Anglers

By Ralph Murdock

A long distance call to Lucille Purser, genial hostess of the swanky Carolinian Hotel at Nag's Head, N. C. (fisherman's paradise to you), convinced us of one fact — that the same nor' easter which also has been hovering over the local area for several days has also been churning up the sea at Oregon Inlet.

Murdock

The feminine voice on the other end of the wire said that the hotel lobby was literally loaded with lounge-ridden anglers who are just champing at the bit to latch onto the bronze bass off the Dare Coast.

Where They Are Biting:

Hardheads—Benedict, Md., looks best and closest for local anglers—catches up to 30. Rowboats and party boats available. Use shrimp.

Shad—Queen Anne Bridge, in the upper Patuxent for the hickories. Casting is the procedure—use Nungesser "00" and Shad-O spoons for best results.

Channel Bass—Oregon Inlet is the spot for the hefties. A recent northeaster slowed up the fishing but the fish are still there. Should average around 40 pounds each.

White Perch—Upper Patuxent River from Hills Bridge to Queen Anne Bridge. Water now muddy. Use bloodworms for bait.

VERNON PALMER, a McLean, Va. angler, fished at Benedict in the afternoon and only landed three croakers. Vernon stated that catches up to 30 were made in the morning, most of the rowboats averaging about 12. On the surface it appears that the early bird catches the fish.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Keefer, 2710 Second st. se., came up with this good news. While still fishing about 100 yards off the Holland Point Buoy the Keefers nabbed eight large hardheads.

'Name' Pilots Ready for Start Of Power Boat Season Sunday

By Happy Walker

THE SPEED BOAT RACING for 1950 will be ushered in Sunday when the Capital Power Boat Association stages its initial regatta on the Potomac River between Memorial and 14th street Bridges.

Walker

An impressive schedule—the first attempted by the freshman CPBA racing clan — gets underway at high noon winding up five hours later with 16 thrill packed events to be run off on the one and one-quarter mile mid-channel course.

The classes will run the gamut from midget JU, 5 h.p. jobs, many home-made, to the powerful, faster 50 h.p. gamesters.

Last year's speed driving discovery — 11-year-old Jackie Lanier will return to the scene of his initial conquest to enter three classes with his "Miss Annie Laurie II," "Fireball, Jr." and "Snooks." Also slated to show are two sophomore drivers, Jack Marr and C. W. Lusby, who will christen their shiny new Barbour rockets.

Barring last minute scratches, it will be the 48 c. i. hydro class which will attract the day's top drivers. Entered are: Howard Scott in "My Folly," Earl Hildebrand in "Jo Jo II," Amato Taneal in "Joy" and Tony DiMagio in "Miss Fort Pitt," the latter pair newcomers in this class.

In the feature event the C racing hydroplanes, Hudson Moses will warm up his new Fillinger hull, "Miss Daphne." Veteran top placer, Ike Hale and his "Senator" will be on deck as will Dick Bowers, Dean Worcester and other older hands. Aubrey Thacker is expected to unveil his new mystery service runabout.

Highly touted Joe Palmer, winner of many national speed boat crowns, will be sitting it out due to incompletion of his new Vissel hull "Tommy Boy." Literally in the same boat with Joe are Bill Castell and Frank Kocsis sweating out delivery of their west coast Wiggins Pacific One Designs.

Jones Fights British Champ Here Tonight

Herbie (Biff) Jones gets another big ring chance tonight even if it is of somewhat dubious nature.

The local southpaw lightweight will be at least a 3-to-1 underdog when he climbs under the ropes at Uline Arena to face Arthur King, British Empire champ.

The bout will be televised by WNBU at 10 o'clock. It will not be broadcast.

That's a bona fide title King has and, with 23 consecutive victories, he's rated one of the outstanding contenders for Ike Williams' world's championship.

The prelims starting at 8:30 o'clock bring together Pat Thomas and Gurnery Van Hook, lightweights, in a six-round semifinal and Jackie Ford vs. Andy Natham, welterweights, in a special five.

In opening fours it will be Danny Richardson vs Lucky Boy and Jimmy Falks vs. Eddie Small, all lightweights.

Terps Score 74 Points to 34 for Hoyas

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

University of Maryland won 3 out of 15 events, but scored a flock of seconds and thirds to run off with the District of Columbia A. A. U. track and field championships for the second straight year yesterday at Catholic University.

The Terps scored 74 points to 34 for second place Georgetown. However, the Hoyas didn't take the defeat too hard. Their freshmen, operating as a separate unit, took third with 26 points, signaling promise of a better showing in 1951.

Jim Fielding, brilliant Hoya frosh from Metuchen, N. J., made off with the 100 and 220-yard championships, and another Hoya yearling, Charlie Capozzoli set a meet record in taking the 2-mile in 9:40.1.

Two other meet marks were broken, by Joe Deady, half miler from Georgetown and Jack Unterkofler of Maryland in the shot.

Deady, who anchored the championship Penn Relays 2-mile team, clicked off a 1:54.5 time, outdistancing his closest competitor, Jim Bruce of Howard by 20 yards. Deady wasn't even puffing hard.

Unterkofler, 210-pound soph from Gaithersburg, flung the shot 47 feet 1 inch, longest heave in history of Catholic U's Brookland Bowl.

The lad who captured the fancy of the crowd of about 500 was Capozzoli, 118 pound New York scholastic mile champ. Almost like a sprinter, he shot to the front of a field of 2-milers which included such veterans as Lindy Kehoe and Bob Palmer of Maryland.

Capozzoli set such a hot pace that three men in the seven-man field dropped out at the fifth lap.

The Washington Post

TESTIMONIAL—Randolph E. Myers (right), executive secretary, Central Branch YMCA, 1736 G st. nw., receives congratulations from George E. Harris (left), dinner chairman, and Jennings Randolph, master of ceremonies, at a dinner last night given in his honor on completion of his 30 years of active YMCA work. 400 persons attended the testimonial held at the "Y". District civic leaders joined in praising Myers' devotion to community work

Prince Georges Group Indorses 2 School Bills

The Prince Georges Civic Federation last night placed its stamp of approval on two House bills providing for Federal aid for education in some critical school areas.

The federation unanimously adopted a motion presented by William R. Turner of the Chillum Civic Association, calling for support of House Bills 7940 and 8113. The former would make school maintenance and operation a Federal Government responsibility in communities where military or civil activity of the Federal Government has created unusual school problems. The latter would help these communities finance school construction.

It was voted to send copies of the resolution to each Maryland member of Congress.

The federation also set May 17 at 8 p. m. for a public meeting where a nonpartisan citizens committee for good government would be formed. Invitations to attend the rally were extended to all interested groups.

In other actions, the federation asked the county commissioners to restore tax cuts made in the Prince Georges budget, and decided not to ask for repeal of certain sections of the Sothoron county reorganization bill, suggested and referred to committee in the April 6 meeting.

A cup was presented to Mrs. Reuben Bogdanoff by The Evening Star for her outstanding civic activity.

Northeast Council

The Northeast Council of Citizens Associations last night not only deplored the House 10 percent cut in the District payment, but also went on record urging a 20 percent hike in the 12-million-dollar appropriation.

The council also backed a Senate bill which would make the undeveloped property in the triangle bounded by 18th st., Taylor st. and South Dakota ave., a city park. The resolution had the strong support of the Michigan Park, the Burroughs and the Rhode Island citizen groups.

The complete slate of present officers, headed by Ralph W. Donnelly of the Brentwood Terrace Citizens Association, was renominated.

Others renamed were: Mrs. Franklin G. Sartwell of the Metropolis View Citizens Association, vice president; Mrs. Edward A. Kane of the Michigan Park Citizens Association, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Melba R. Harlowe of the Dahlgren Terrace Citizens Association, recording secretary, and Frank E. Harrison of the Burroughs Citizens Association, treasurer. The meeting was held at the No. 12 Precinct Station.

Trinidad

Opposition to transfer of Washington's pools and playgrounds from the Federal to District government was voiced by the Trinidad Community Association, meeting at the Hayes School, 5th and K sts. ne.

The association went on record favoring the 5-day, 40-hour week for police of the District. Mrs. C. G. Mayo presided.

3 BEAUTIFUL HILLS

About a mile frontage on River and Bradley rds., overlooking Congressional Country Club. One of these hills has the more perfect setting for a home than any other property around Greater Washington. The setting for this home is more beautiful than Mr. Truman's White House or George Washington's Mount Vernon home. This homesite has been withdrawn from the market. I'm building my own home on this beautiful setting. Mr. James E. Elgin, the best builder in Montgomery County, is constructing this home. Ride up on the hill and look at the construction and compare it with anything else you have ever seen around Washington. A 35,000-lb. bulldozer has been pushing down trees that are 2 feet in diameter. When I compare this beautiful setting with many other homes around Washington, where people have murdered their own money because they didn't know how to select a perfect setting for their home, come out and look at this beautiful setting—it won't cost you anything. Two adjoining hills of about 30 acres each can be had at 15c a sq. ft. There is one 5-acre lot where River rd. and Bradley rd. join which can be had at 20c a sq. ft. You can reach me at my home, WO. 0933. Fulton R. Gordon, owner. Brokers' attention.

Walter Winchell —In New York

Memos of a Girl Friday

Dear Mr. W.: Remember when Sinclair Lewis and William Saroyan startled the literary pipple by refusing to accept Pulitzer Prizes? Well, here's a skewp: The National Institute of Arts & Letters awarded Henry L. Mencken a special gold medal for his "life's work" as an author. Mr. Mencken (ailing in Baltimore) turned it down. Whereupon the Institute, reeling from the blow, said that the medal had been struck, inscribed and engraved—and, besides, the speech planned by Mark Van Doren was written and they were going ahead, anyway! Good old Menck, now 69 and so sick, a critic to the end . . . You said yesterday that the N. Y. Times' Pulitzer winner for top reporting (Meyer Berger) never finished his 2d year at high school. But what you didn't punchline is that the Times still won't give a hearing to an aspiring reporter who hasn't a collitch degree!

After the Pulitzer award to Rodgers, Hammerstein and Logan for "S. Pac." author Edna Ferber wired Rodgers: "For once, the whole world agrees on one thing!" . . . Stella Roman was telling friends the importance of "Pacific" getting the Pulitzer ribbon. "It means," she said, "another $100,000 at the box-office" . . . "Zatso?" said a wag. "Where are they gonna put it?"

This happened at the U. N. unveiling before Vishinsky left for Moscow . . . A boy asked Gov. Dewey for his autograph. One of the officious Dewey aides brushed off the lad with: "He doesn't give autographs!" . . . "My parents voted for him," almost wept the kid . . . Vishinsky (standing alongside) took advantage of the situation and made a gesture to win over another American. "Here, son," said Moscow's missionary, "I'll give you my autograph" . . . The boy's father told it to friends of mine. Imagine.

All the hoss-players in the NBC newsroom on May 1st bet Trout Lake to beat Walter's Boy at Pimlico. The idea being that the staffers figured a horse with part of Bob Trout's name might have a chance against the one with part of yours. Soooo, wot hoppin'? Walter's Boy won and Trout Lake ran 2d. Just like in real life, ha, ha . . . Speaking of radio folks, a radio editor on a Cincy paper is deaf and a television editor (same town) is blind. He hates Kukla, Fran & Ollie, which the poor man can't see . . . Jack Barry, who has 4 clicks on the networks, starts a 5th via NBC shortly . . . Hudnut wants you to simulcast via Teevy immediately. Means you can't leave town.

In reviewing "Peter Pan" not one critic mentioned the singular fact that 2 years ago the star, Jean Arthur (who plays the title role), gave up the films for a course at Stephens College in Missouri. And who teaches at Stephens? Maude Adams, for whom James Barrie originally wrote the classic, that's who. Miss Arthur's britches, by the way, are tested every day for rips. She's the most delightful thing in Pan-ts . . . Here's a heckuva note: Jean Bruce answers readers' problems in the Nashville Tennessean. One wife, signing her query "Frightened," wrote: "My husband is living with another woman. I want to get a divorce but he says he will kill me if I do. What shall I do?" The answer was: "Call his bluff" . . . Haw!

Newest drink among the Around-the-Clocktail Set is Cherry Julep. Yummy . . . Marcia Henderson's father didn't put up any money for "Peter Pan." She out-auditioned the field and Cole Porter predicted last year nothing can stop her. Very pretty girl plus talent . . . Felix Young's swank spot is now Hollywood's top rendezvous, to hear the coasters in town rave about it. Glammer, violins and atmosphere . . . The mail response from Berle's Telethon for the Runyon Fund is enormous. Every letter contains folding money and checks. First two days' mail lots better than last year's . . . John Frederics' designer, Fred, is bringing back Moroccan veils. His theory is that women need more mystery.

Rita Hayworth, a little heavier than she was, keeps a jealous orb on her Prince Chomming. A letter from there adds that since he smashed his leg the job is a little easier, but she's taking no chances. She laaahves him so . . . Kay Swift, one of Broadway's top tunesmiths in the 30s, is back with some ditties and something of her life story in "Come Share My Love," due at the Music Hall soon . . . Bob Ruark's heard The Call. Plans making a movie in Spain this summer . . . Loved G. Allison's comment in his review of the new show at the Riviera. "Nobody who was Nobody was there," he flipped. "Only requirement for admission was money!"

CBS sent out this memo to all its network salesmen: "Hooper's new ratings tend to show that television gets more of the audience than is actually the case. With the application of some simple arithmetic, we can now show how serious this bias is. How much it penalizes radio . . . He is overestimating TV ownership and arbitrarily reduces the ratings of radio programs and inflates TV programs. In short, Hooper is placing about 40 percent of his phone calls in TV homes here at a time when TV ownership (NY area) is liberally estimated at about 30 percent. The net effect is that Hooper's 'all homes ratings' tend to be at least one third higher than they should be for TV and about 15 percent lower than they should be for radio" . . . Hmmmmm.

Wednesday's N. Y. Herald Trib devoted most of its Page 21 to two stories we tipped several days before. The King of Siam writing the "Peep Show" score and Hancock getting Luckman's post at Lever Bros . . . Chatted with George Jean Nathan. Discussed "The Cocktail Party," which I loved. He says it is "well-written bosh" . . . Ja see Times' radio section? Uses Berlesque. Wondered when they'd get around to it . . . Have a lissen to Jan Garber's delightful disc of "Star Dust." Muted cornet renders it the way Hoagy fathered it . . . A high spot in "Tickets, Please!" (with the Hartmans) is Roger Price. Bigtime guy . . . The Floyd Odlums (Jacqueline Cochran) say they aren't keeping any secret. How dull! . . . Here's one to make you feel good. DeWitt Wallace, publisher of Reader's Digest, will reprint "Runyon's Last Story" (about the Fund) by Collier's Albert Q. Maisel in the August issue. Oughta bring in another million . . . Bevin's operation was a failure. He's recovering.—Your Girl Friday.

Part-Time Jobs Forbidden for County Police

Montgomery County Chief of Police Charles M. Orme announced yesterday that no policeman can hold a part-time job in addition to working on the force.

The order takes effect May 19.

At a meeting of the Montgomery County Personnel Board Wednesday night, representatives of the County Police Association said about 47 percent of the force hold part-time jobs.

Meantime, a Police Association proposal for pay increases to put Montgomery County police salaries on par with Washington police salaries is being considered by the personnel board.

The Police Association opposes Orme's ruling. The association will meet in the Rockville Police Court Wednesday at 8 p. m. to discuss possible action.

Since September 1, 1948, the county police wage scale has been: Chief, $5400; inspector, $4500 to $4700; captain, $4200 to $4400; lieutenant, $3900 to $4100; sergeant, $3600 to $3800; corporal, $3400 to $3500; private, $2600 to $3300; detective sergeant, $3800 to $3900; detective corporal, $3500 to $3600; desk clerk and radio dispatcher, $2400 to $3000.

Thoroughgoing Thieves

The thieves who broke into the American Service Center, 585 N. Glebe rd., Arlington, on Wednesday overlooked few tricks of their trade. They stole 7 radios, 2 television sets and 6 smaller appliances. Then they took a crack at the office safe, without success. They left in an automobile parked outside for repairs.

All Odds Against Embezzlers

By Kenneth L. Hall

This is the fifth of a series of six articles about embezzlers of high and low degree plus the advice of experts on how business can protect itself.

CHAPTER FIVE

The average embezzler may be described briefly as a fellow who is an expert at subtraction but a dub at figuring percentages.

If he weren't a dub, he'd never embezzle. The odds are all against him.

But then the average embezzler is not a true criminal. He'd been an honest man for years. He's usually not aware of the intricate, far-flung machinery he sets into motion when he yields to opportunity and he absconds with his company's cash.

He's a little guy caught in a self-made web of deception. When the web begins to lighten, he wrenches himself free and runs like a scared rabbit.

And where does he run? Right into a bigger net—the dragnet of the FBI, State and local police, detectives, private investigators, reward-seekers, and sharp-eyed citizenry in general.

That's what happened to William Arthur Nickel, a $100-a-week cashier for the Mergenthaler Linotype Co. of Brooklyn, N. Y.

Forty-six year old, Nickel had been with the firm for 20 years. He lived with his wife and 16-year-old daughter in a rather modest though expensively furnished home in Freeport on the south shore of Long Island.

Made Money Stretch

He owned two new Buick sedans, a $42,000 yacht, a $9000 cabin cruiser, and belonged to a swank yacht club.

Obviously, Nickel, the $100-a-week cashier was a man who could make money stretch.

In November of 1946 a check was drawn up improperly in his own department. The mistake attracted the attention of an official who failed to recognize the firm to which it was payable. He summoned the cashier to his office for an explanation.

Nickel was most cooperative He promised to search the records and clear up the matter next morning

Next day, when he failed to show up for work, accountants were sent blood-hounding through his books. It didn't take them long to learn why the cashier was missing

The chase was an easy one for the police. With the singular lack of imagination that characterizes the embezzler in flight, Nickel had headed for a warm clime. Detectives found him in a $21-a-week hotel room at Miami Beach, registered as Phillip Haas.

When arrested, he had $18 in his pocket—mere cigarette money compared with the $804,833 he had embezzled within the amazingly short time of one year

Aided by Confederates

Nickel's "system" was simple. He wrote checks ranging from $2000 to $9000 payable to fictitious payees or to firms with which Mergenthaler did business, but at fictitious addresses. The checks in many cases were cashed by his accomplices, all of whom were dealt with in time by due process of law.

A report was recently printed about one of the accomplices, Jimmy Collins, a character known to police of both coasts, now resting safely in prison.

Collins, reported to have most of the Mergenthaler loot cached, was offered his freedom if he would reveal where the money is hidden. He is said to have refused on the grounds that he'll need the money to take care of himself in his old age. If his prison term runs its full length, Collins is already provided for, well into his dotage.

Another ironic sidelight of the case is the fact that Nickel was bonded for the sum of only $5000—about one half of one percent of the amount he stole.

"Blanket" Bonds Urged

Bonding companies have long urged employers to buy "blanket" coverage on key personnel.

"Better be safe than sorry" is the lesson many employers will learn the hard way this year through lack of adequate bonding.

Bonding, however, is only one way that American business can help protect itself from the Trojan Horse of embezzlement.

There are other ways, definite methods outlined by sociologists and criminologists who have closely studied conditions in which embezzlement breeds.

These methods are worth the attention of every employer with a payroll and profits to protect. They can combat at its source the hydra-headed monster that devours 400 million dollars annually in stolen funds.

It's Not Just Bad

Film Acting on Video Is Simply Atrocious

By John Crosby

ONE of the paradoxes of television in its present state of infancy is the fact that the acting in the filmed dramas imported east from Hollywood is atrocious. I'm not saying it's bad, you understand. It's horrible. This isn't because Hollywood hasn't got any good actors. Hollywood is loaded with them. But the best of them are prevented from appearing on television by their studios. The rest of them are scared away by a curious social stigma which actors in the movie capital still attach to video. Around 1905 stage actors felt the same way about getting into the movies.

In fact, a lot of stage people felt strongly that movies were a fad that would blow over in time. A noted actor once proclaimed this theory at great length to a movie producer. Twenty-five years later he was sitting in the same producer's house watching television. He tapped the producer on the shoulder and said: "See, I told you so."

LET'S get back to business. One of the more ambitious filmed television shows now doing the rounds is "Fireside Theater," which is produced by Bing Crosby Enterprises and is a series of half-hour dramas filmed especially for television. Some have been pretty good. Many have been very bad.

All of them have been weakened by certain Hollywood fixations, attitudes that have crept into movies—at least the bad ones—and become entrenched.

It's rather difficult to define these attitudes, but I'll try. They add up to a sort of slickness and, at the same time, thinness that goes all down the line. It is seen in myriads of little things—trifles, all of them—but the sum cheapens the whole picture. The hairlines, for example, are just a bit too well plucked. The ingenues all look like the same girl. The actors light their cigarettes with superb flourish, but they all flourish alike.

ALL this is very evident in "Fireside Theater" dramas, the good ones and the bad ones. Let's take a pretty good one. It was a story set in Paris in 1880 about an aged, kindly, totally scrupulous detective assigned to investigate a murder who discovers the murderer is the son of the Minister of Justice. He is told by higher authority to lay off. He won't. He implores the young man to confess to clear his conscience.

He is dismissed from the prefecture and the case is hushed up. He becomes a chestnut vendor and by chance a customer one night is the killer. Again he implores him to confess. The killer just laughs and, later, the little gray former detective is framed by the police and jailed.

After that it is a story of the disintegration of the young killer under the pangs of conscience. He slavishly follows the former detective, now reduced to beggary, whom he considers his only friend. Again the corrupt Ministry of Justice takes a hand and this time has the old man murdered. Over the corpse, the conscience-tortured young man confesses his misdeed to a crowd of passers-by, and the police are finally forced to act.

A VERY skilled hand, conceivably de Maupassant—though I haven't any idea—wrote the original. And it was a pretty memorable drama on television, marred only by Hollywood's improvements—the hairline, the settings, the postures, those expressions. If you see what the Hollywood fixations do to a good story, you can imagine what they do to a bad one. In one of "Fireside Theater's" real bad ones, a multi-multi promised a pretty dame one million dollars if she would stay married to him for 10 years. After that, she was on her own. Well, she sticks it out, collects a check for one million clams, tears it up and falls on his neck, screeching "I love you."

Now, look here, Bing Crosby Enterprises. The girl might have stuck with him. She might have screeched "I love you." She'd never have torn up that check.

How Your Dinner Comes to You

In D.C.'s Fish Story, Big Ones Don't Get Away

This is the first in a series of six stories on how food from farm, field and fishing ground reaches the Washington market.

By Lucia Brown

FROM the cold deeps of the North Atlantic, from sun-drenched Pacific islands, even from Africa, comes seafood to grace the dinner tables of Washington, D. C.

But from much closer to home comes a huge portion of the District's fishy fare. Caught in our own Chesapeake Bay and Potomac River, it sizzles on local platters 24 hours after it leaves the water. This includes the shad, soft shell crab, rock, croakers and other fish that lend a distinctive regional flavor to the daily diet of the mightiest capital on earth.

Actually Washington isn't the top fish-eating city of the East Coast. Boston, New York, Philadelphia, even nearby Baltimore, outshine it in the number of fish consumed per capita. Experts at Fish and Wildlife Service say it's because so many inlanders live in Washington, working for the Government. These "adopted" Washingtonians haven't acquired the hearty appetite for seafood of those reared along the coast.

But every year in our city, thousands of Americans enjoy for the first time the taste of food freshly netted from salt water. Visitors from Indiana, Kentucky and South Dakota, here to see the cherry blossoms and the White House, sample succulent fish dishes in our restaurants. Thousands of foreigners, too, investigate the native seafood at diplomatic dinner tables.

Netting Fish for 40 Years

TO FIND out how this rich store is scooped from the briny and delivered at Washington's kitchen door, we set sail from Shadyside, Md., early last Monday in a "dead rise bateau." It was the 45-foot fishing boat of genial Capt. Bernard Hallock, who has been netting fish in the Chesapeake for well over 40 years.

"Started out with my daddy when I was 15," explained Captain Hallock over a 5 a. m. breakfast of pork chops, fried eggs and toast. He had invited us in "for a cup of coffee" before the boat shoved off.

"My folks have lived on this strip of land since the 1600's" he said, looking out his kitchen window at the gray but placid bay. "Lord Calvert granted them 3000 acres. My grandfather—don't know how many greats—was his 'ambasy,' a sort of lawyer."

The captain and his son downed three pork chops apiece and we did as well as landlubbers could. Then we all climbed aboard the blue and white boat with Princess on its prow. Towing a skiff, we headed out the inlet into a cold, cloudy dawn. Another large boat and a skiff owned by the captain and his family went along, too, for it takes a small fleet to tend the 10 big nets owned by the Hallocks. Each fishing boat was manned by a crew of three or four.

The Hallock nets are located on shoals not far off Beverly and Triton beaches. Maybe you noticed the stakes as you tossed a beach ball or swam sidestroke last summer at those watery playgrounds. The nets cost some $2000 apiece to buy and install. They stay there 9 or 10 months of the year, being taken up in December.

Drive Stakes Every Spring

"WE MEND 'em and copper 'em in the winter," Captain Hallock said. "That means using copper paint to keep off marine growth. Under the law, we have to pull up the stakes when they're not in use. So every spring, we drive 1500 to 2000 stakes when we put the nets down again."

These stakes run as long as 50 feet and some are almost as big as telephone poles. They're sunk in the bay floor in water of about 25 foot depth and hold in place the huge square "pound" nets and the long "lead" nets that draw the fish into them. Openings in the bottom of the basket-like nets are used to trap the fish.

Extracting the denizens of the deep from these nets is quite an operation. The bateau is tied to a net stake and the edge of the net fastened to the side of the boat. The trap in the bottom of the net is pulled closed with a rope. Then Captain Hallock and his crew get into the skiff, paddle around to the other side of the net, shove down its edge, and float their boat inside it.

Once there, they start gathering in the net like a dressmaker draping material. Fold after fold is lopped over the edge of the smaller boat until only a narrow trough is left between it and the big one. This is crowded with hundreds of fish, leaping in agitation.

The fishermen then fasten the big net

OFF Beverly Beach in the Chesapeake Bay, Capt. Bernard Hallock and his helpers gather in the folds of a stationary "pound" net until all its fish are cornered in one section next to their larger boat, the "Princess." The net, shaped like a huge square basket, is held in place by stakes driven into the floor of the Chesapeake. Fish enter through an opening in the bottom of the net, which is pulled closed to trap them before this harvest is gathered from the bay

DIPPING shad and herring out of the briny, Raymond Fountain and Ralph Crowner transfer them from the stationary net to the 45-foot fishing boat. Captain Hallock supervises the job from the skiff in which they cornered the fish

TWENTY-FOUR hours later, a dinner of fresh Chesapeake Bay fish is enjoyed by this family in a Washington seafood restaurant. Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Wingum came originally from Minneapolis, Minn., but, with their daughters, Karen (left) and Susan (right), have grown fond of coastal fare. They live in Falls Church

Smart Summer Uniform Is the Linen Suit

I'm glad the linen suit has become such a big summer fashion this year because I've always thought it one of the smartest and most useful things a woman can have in her summer wardrobe. You can wear it at the Ritz or at the super market, in town or in the country, depending on the color you choose.

As a matter of fact I think most women could have at least two linen suits—a black or navy for summer or in the city—and a white or pastel color for the country. Or if you want only one to span both, take it in gray or toast or a cool leaf green.

Garden Clubs Share Flower Mart Booths

Garden groups and clubs from the District, Alexandria, and the counties of Fairfax, Montgomery and Prince Georges are taking part in Washington Cathedral's annual flower mart.

Sponsored as always by All Hallows Guild, the garden guild of the cathedral, the 1950 flower mart will be held on the cathedral grounds today. (Or, if rain, on Saturday, May 6.)

Mrs. Harry S. Truman has again consented to preside at the opening of the Flower Mart by cutting the satin entrance ribbons at 11 a. m.

Besides sharing in the sale of plants, seedlings, handcrafted articles, and delicious foods of all sorts, from which the proceeds will be used for landscaping and gardening the cathedral grounds, the outlying clubs also compete for the prizes annually awarded for the most beautiful and distinctive booth arrangements.

Ayr Hill Garden Club of Vienna, Va., where Mrs. B. Frank Kyles has charge of Flower Mart participation, is concentrating upon seedlings; Forest Hills Garden Club booth will be in charge of Mrs. C. J. Gridley; the Georgetown Garden Club, Mrs. William Kerkham, jr., chairman, will handle cakes and cookies; Silver Spring Garden Club, Mrs. Lee Lloyd in charge, plans an ice cream booth; the Perennial Garden Club, Mrs. Andrew Parker in charge, will decorate the tables for the hot lunch to be served at the mart.

Other Flower Mart booths include the Chevy Chase (Md.) Garden Club, Mrs. James Strayer, booth chairman; Great Falls Garden Club, Mrs. Collas Harris; Trowel Club, Mrs. C. H. Maddox; Fairfax Garden Club, Mrs. Walter Macomber; Wesley Heights Garden Club, Mrs. J. E. Wissler; Washington Garden Club, Mrs. R. J. Jorolemon; Tuesday Afternoon Club of Fairfax, Mrs. William C. Peck; Leesburg Garden Club, Mrs. Burdett S. Wright; Difficult Run Garden Club, Mrs. Tillman Leigh; Fort Belvoir Garden Club, Mrs. Crow.

The incoming officers are Mrs. Edith Van Note, chairman; Mrs. Rosemary Fasick, vice chairman; Mrs. Dorothy Fricke, recording secretary; Mrs. Jerry Preston, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Betty Clark, treasurer; Mrs. Dorothy Horner, editor; Miss Jane Miller, chaplain and sergeant at arms. Jill Conlon, Joan George, Anne Lanahan, Ruth McKee, Della Schultz, Louise Towles and Doris Williams are the new members.

Mrs. Gilchrist Heads 20th Century Club

Mrs. Raleigh Gilchrist was elected president of the Twentieth Century Club, without opposition, at a meeting of the organization yesterday at the YWCA.

Also chosen unanimously were Mrs. William Henry McGlauflin, first vice president, and Mrs. Donald B. Clement, corresponding secretary. Five new board members, elected from a slate of 10, are Mrs. Robert Swan Townsend, Mrs. Dion S. Birney, Mrs. Wilbur LaRoe, jr., Mrs. Howard G. Nichols and Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith.

The club voted to appropriate $100 for films for Gallinger Hospital, to complete the gift of a film projector presented last month. Annual reports of officers concluded the session, which was followed by the final luncheon of the season.

A special feature of the day was the presentation of the clubs' annual "Clean City Awards" to four employes of the District of Columbia division of sanitation. Recipients were Ward Duckett, Clarence Walker, Charles Smith and James Carter. Mrs. A. Leckie Cox was in charge of this part of the program.

Girl, 16, Asks How to Cope With Mother Whose Emphatic Interest in Education Is Ventilated In Lectures to Girl's Friends; They Squirm

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 16 and have two brothers and one sister. My brothers Joe and Bill both are in college out of town and Sis and I go to school here.

Mother is a fanatic on education and always has been disappointed because I do not receive high grades. When I have friends or dates call upon me, she will keep them for an hour at a time discussing their schooling and what courses they should take; and she emphasizes what her two boys have done.

When I have mentioned to her how I have seen my friends squirming in discomfort during her lectures, she tells me I should be very proud of my brothers, and she pointedly intimates that I have disappointed her greatly. It has come to the point where I have been rude, trying to stop her from forcing her opinions on my friends.

She definitely does not approve of any of my friends, and although they all are of nice moderate families such as ours, she tells me that I am above any of them. How does one cope with such a problem? F. W.

Misses Meaning of Monologues

DEAR F. W.: Probably your mother isn't so much a fanatic on education as she is crazy about her sons and tirelessly willing to talk about them, in guise of showing an interest in the other person.

It is my guess that, confronted by young people, she talks about school grades and courses as "middle ground" for introducing her favorite subject, namely her wonderful sons. Being daftly partial to her boys, who happen to do well scholastically, it is inevitable that she would rhapsodize about their good marks, among other things; but without intent to draw invidious comparisons with your record, unless you show hurt feelings and start an argument, after which she may harangue in needling vein.

The fact that your mother tensely detains your friends as audience material indicates that she has little life of her own, in the social sense. She is confined to an orbit too small for her energies. That is why she wears you down with her single theme. At this distance I feel the worst that could be said of her is that she is a bore, poor dear. That is why she irritates you and why your friends squirm in discomfort while she lets off steam.

Educated Bores Affect Superiority

AS YOU gain social experience you will observe, I am sure, that bores with a veneer of culture are always claiming caste-superiority to nearly everybody, including their peers and betters. I think it's because the typical bore is unhappily aware that hardly anyone seems glad to see him, and rather than investigate the possibility that the fault might be with him, he bandies the theory that others' inferiority and bad taste is the hindrance. So with your mother, I judge—a bore and a snob in the same breath, due to living too narrowly, and never daring to face herself.

The average adult who has built up a good stockpile of friends in his own age group just doesn't bother much trying to make conversation with juniors. If they want to converse and offer leads, your average adult is willing to respond; but in general, he (or she) would prefer to save up conversational energy for use in grown-up company.

How to cope with your mother's tedious temperament? If she won't take this major hint to examine her faults and correct them, then you'll have to fall back on the old philosophy of "grin and bear it." What cannot be cured must be endured, the saying goes. And remember the teens don't last forever. A few years more and you'll be off to college or married, or maybe living "on your own" as a careerist. Meanwhile see what you can do about keeping your filial manners in good repair.

Big Ones Don't Get Away From Local Fishermen

Shad the Sought-for Prize

SHAD was the prize eagerly sought the day we went out on the fishing boat. Every catch was anxiously scanned and the shad sorted out immediately. The great majority of the fish were herrings, although an occasional striped rock or a big golden carp turned up, too. Shad bring the fishermen 5 cents a pound for buck and 15 cents a pound for roe shad, while herring are worth only ½-cent apiece now.

Once, as we approached a net from far off, the captain let out a sudden exclamation. "Look at them gangsters!" he cried angrily.

Half a dozen huge loons—black birds with white breasts and long, razor-sharp bills—were resting on the water inside the nets. They dived under as we drew near and didn't reappear until the captain drew them up with the catch.

"Some of these buzzards have actually built their nests on my nets," he said, indignantly. "The loons and the cranes and the shad gannets spear fish and ruin them without eating them. Besides, they scare the shad so they swim out of the net. Make us lose thousands of dollars every year!"

The captain felt more kindly toward the sea gulls that followed the boats with whimpering, pleading cries as we headed for shore. His helpers sorted out damaged fish and little menhaden—a fish few people care to eat—and tossed them to the hungry birds.

Cargo Unloaded, Weighed

GALESVILLE was our destination—the Woodfield Fish & Oyster Co., to be specific. Here our cargo was unloaded and weighed in.

Can you imagine catching 35,000 fish? It's enough to make any amateur bug-eyed, but that's how many we had. Captain Hallock said it was just a small catch, though, and shook his head over the mere 500 shad in the lot. He hadn't visited all his nets because the plant could take only a limited amount of fish that day.

The Woodfield company is unique in this section because of the wide variety of fish it handles in a variety of ways. Some shad, for instance, is stripped of its roe and this is sent to market separately in cans. Other shad and roe are frozen in individual cellophane packages, to be marketed later in season. Roe is extracted from the herring, too, and put up in cans. Herring is also salted down, to be smoked elsewhere.

All the seafood is trucked away from the plant, about half of it coming into the Washington market. Here it's turned over mainly to jobbers and chain stores, Charles Woodfield told us, though the company has a retail shop on the wharf.

The cargo of the trucks varies with the time of year. Soon they'll be hauling more croakers (hardheads), plus sea trout and bluefish. Rockfish are netter the year 'round, but were most plentiful in March and April, and will be again in September and October. The crab season is starting soon, though the Woodfields do not handle many of these. In September oystering begins. The company also imports shrimp from down South and freezes it from July to November.

No fish, incidentally, are brought to the Washington wharves directly from the nets. In this modern age, several forms of transportation are involved in getting it rapidly from bay to board. For far-away fish—those caught in the Gulf, the West Coast—the transportation is even more impressive, involving air and rail as well as trucks.

Science Keep You Young

Exercise Keeps You Slim, Supple

This is the fifth in a series of 12 articles on keeping young.

By Ida Jean Kain

MOST middle-agers are less than warm on the exercise score. They don't want bulging biceps, their daily work doesn't call for great strength of muscle, so it's easy to take the comfortable view that exercise is beside the point.

And that's a fast way to grow old. . . . In youth we have fine, strong bodies, but by early middle age too many are soft and flabby and plagued by common ailments and minor miseries . . . and life has lost its zest.

If we lived life as nature equipped us, we could get plenty of exercise in the course of a day. But modern living makes very little muscle demand—not even enough to keep joints flexible; certainly not enough to keep the circulation briskly up and doing. And make no mistake about it, circulation is the fountain of youth. As long as the blood flows freely, bringing nourishment to tissues and carrying away waste promptly, old age has not set in.

To be healthy, let alone shapely, bodies must be used. True, the majority use the small muscles over and over—the hands and arms, the eyes and the muscles at the back of the neck. But continuous use of these small muscles builds up tension and results in mental weariness. The antidote is physical activity. It takes an hour of walking out in the fresh air to bring the blood into the big muscles and stir up the circulation.

Billie Burke . . . supple at sixty, and young, too. She stands on her head for exercise!

We need physical exercise daily. If we could all play outdoors a couple of hours a day at golf, hiking, gardening, anything that held our interest, it would be ideal, and without doubt would do away with three fourths of the nervous breakdowns. This does not mean to play at highly competitive sports in middle-age or try to prove we're as good as ever. That is when exercise is dangerous.

Circulation Slows, Joints Get Old

BUT no exercise in middle-age is not the answer. Circulation slows up and joints get old. In fact, creaking joints and limited motion are evidences of lack of flexibility and fair warning of advancing age. Doing away with muscular effort in daily life can age joints alarmingly—they can be 10 to 15 years older than legal age!

Think of the joints as a superb arrangement of parts to allow for ease of motion, and keep them in good working order by putting them through their full range of motion every day . . . bend the knees, circle arms at shoulders, swing legs loosely at hip joints. Stretch to stimulate circulation. And add a daily straight-away walk to use the big muscles . . . or overstuffed chair will get you sure enough.

Anyone can benefit from the above mild exercise program, done regularly. If you are interested in a more active program, get a physical checkover and take the kind of exercise that helps you feel like a new person, physically and mentally.

Glass Fiber Shades Are Washable, All You Need to Watch Are a Few 'Ifs', One Reader Advises

DEAR ANNE:

This is an attempt to answer the query in your column of May 2 about how to clean glass fiber lamp shades. As one who worked in the New York factory where the best of this material is made, I am certain of what I say about the cleanability of the lamp shade glass fiber material.

As far as the material itself is concerned, your reader need have no fear of what will happen to it when it is washed with warm water containing one of the new detergent materials or plain soap and water. The material may be cleaned by simply wiping it with a moist cloth and then wiping dry.

But the thing to be watched is the seaming or binding on these shades. The binding may be merely a water soluble adhesive on a paper base. If this is the case, care should be taken to keep water from the taped bindings. That is one reason most of the lamp shades of this material are hand-laced with material that will withstand cleaning.

If your reader has the latter type of shade, she may dip the whole shade into soapy water and swish it around a little and it will come out perfectly clean and undamaged. However, some of the frames on which such shades are made may be unprotected from rust and hence will get rusting and may soil the glass fiber material.

So, for safest and best results, do not dip the frame into water unless you are sure that the binding is waterproof and the frame rust proof. In any case, a gentle scrubbing with a cloth soaked in good warm soap solution will turn the trick. S. K., Washington.

DEAR ANNE:

Can you tell me how to clean a gilt picture frame? This is not gold-leaf, but just a frame that has been gilded.

C. T., Takoma Park.

The gilding on a picture frame is so thin that even gentle rubbing may injure it. When soiled, it can be cleaned with a half-and-half mixture of alcohol and household ammonia, applied with a camel's-hair brush. After the preparation is left on a few minutes to soften the dirt, it is removed with clear water, also applied with a soft brush. Water that remains is shaken off—not wiped—and the frame is stood on edge to dry naturally.

DEAR ANNE:

I would like to know if it would be all right to wear an evening gown (with jacket) in a large floral print to a formal at this time of year. I am from out of town and uncertain about this.

Miss Golden, Washington.

The gown would be perfectly correct and very pretty and springlike at this time of year. Print evening gowns seem to be worn over a longer span of months now than formerly, anyway.

DEAR ANNE:

Even tightly closed packages of brown sugar seem to get hard on the shelf. I'd like to know how to keep sugar from getting hard, rather than how to soften hardened sugar.

M. M. C., Silver Spring.

Placing a couple of prunes of top of the sugar, then closing the package tightly (slip a rubber band around it if need be) will keep the sugar from hardening.

Anne answers questions through her column only. Address letters to "Anne," Room 408, The Washington Post, Washington 4, D. C. Names and addresses of questioners will be used, unless specifically requested otherwise.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Had Your Eyes Checked Lately, John?

Post Reporter John Ball is trying to unravel a mystery he came across while driving in from Waldorf, Md., yesterday.

"A green Chrysler with Tennessee tags whizzed past me," John reports, "and quickly disappeared from sight. I wondered why the sailor behind the wheel was in such a big hurry.

"Just as I entered the District, the same car came zipping past me again—but this time an old man was driving.

"There was no mistaking the car—and I kept wondering about the great haste, and the change of drivers, until I reached Capitol Hill.

"There the same green Chrysler passed me again—this time with a pretty young girl at the wheel. That baffled me completely."

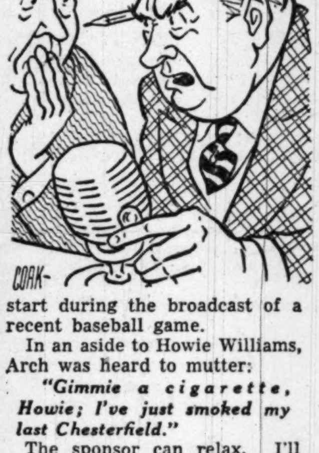
WORD FROM THE SPONSOR

Jerry Richardson of 3416 25th st. se. reports that Arch McDonald gave his listeners quite a start during the broadcast of a recent baseball game.



In an aside to Howie Williams, Arch was heard to mutter:

"Gimmie a cigarette, Howie; I've just smoked my last Chesterfield."

The sponsor can relax. I'll vouch for the fact that Arch didn't mean he was swearing off the brand that feeds him. He was just trying to get in an extra commercial.

These radio guys have to be mighty careful about such things. I recall a fellow some years back who was making $25,000 a year doing a sports show for Mail Pouch chewing tobacco.

He and Branch Rickey and a host of other notables attended a crucial game in the American Legion playoffs in our town, and of course we took pictures of the visiting firemen grouped around home plate.

Unthinking, the "Mail Pouch Sportsman" posed with a cigarette in his hand.

You should have seen the color drain from his face when our photographer, a droll fellow, snapped the picture and cooed: "Now on this next one would you like to throw away the cigarette and puff out your jaw like you had a chaw in it?"

PERSONAL NOTES

Mrs. J. C. L.: I didn't print that item "just by chance," as you put it. I figured that a good many folks entitled to help from the Vocational Rehabilitation Service didn't know of its existence, and that an informative article might be of help to them. I once did a broadcast from the United States Employment Service office and flooded the radio station's switchboard as a result. Callers were people who had never heard about Uncle Sam's employment service. They wanted to know how to contact the local office.

Mrs. Wilson H. Bailey, 117 Willow ave., Takoma Park, Md.: Thanks. Our Give-Away service is the best in town. Ask any kitten.

PAGE DIOGENES

Earlier, James Doran of 5426 2d st. nw. had complained that the carrier boy failed to deliver his paper.

A special messenger from our "Guaranteed Home Delivery" force hustled a paper out to the Doran residence. But two days later, we got this note:

"While sweeping the front porch, Mrs. Doran discovered the missing ppaer neatly tucked under the door mat, so that the wind wouldn't blow it about.

"In a spirit of fair play, I think this should be called to your attention, so that the carrier will not be criticized unjustly. Please tell the boy I am sorry if I caused him any trouble, and hereafter we will look under the mat on windy days.

"I know what the carriers are up against. I served the New London (Conn.) "Day" way back when there was a Republican in the White House—and that wasn't exactly last week."

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Austrian on Good Will Tour

By Drew Pearson

A gangling Austrian youth with an engaging smile is the pay-off in a great campaign for international good will. He is Eric Geiger, a Junior Chamber of Commerce member from Salzburg, Austria, and now an adopted son of Texas.

Pearson

Geiger has been touring the United States as a guest of patriotic Jaycees in the U. S. A., living in their homes, taking part in their dinner-table arguments, and meeting their friends.

The project began with letters exchanged between the Salzburg and Amarillo, Tex., Junior Chamber of Commerce. Finally, as one step in promoting people-to-people friendship, the Texans "adopted" the Salzburg Chamber and arranged for Eric's visit to the U. S. A.

He stayed in Amarillo with a different member each day, and eventually arrived in Washington where he watched sessions of Congress, took in the Lattimore hearing, and met Secretary of State Dean Acheson.

Congress fascinated Geiger. "It is so democratic and so individual," he said. "In our parliament if a member dares defy his party, he must resign. Here, you have so much freedom!"

The trip has been a real success. Now other Junior Chambers of Commerce have decided to "adopt" and bring more European Jaycees to this country.

Communist Who's Who

The Communist Daily Worker has violently denounced Earl Browder, exleader of the Communists, and Bella V. Dodd, ex-Communist, following their testimony that Owen Lattimore was never a Communist party member nor a Soviet spy . . . You can't tell who's where or when about Communists any more . . . Speaking of who's where, the files of the Communist New Masses show that blueblood Governor of Massachusetts, Leverett Saltonstall (now Senator), wrote a special article for the New Masses in 1944 stating: "The Moscow pact and Cairo and Teheran parleys are the answer to the prayers of millions of people that nations can get along together." . . . Better not let Senator McCarthy or Congressman Smathers see that . . . Also Gardner Cowles, jr., publisher of Look, praised the Russians in the same New Masses. So did A. M. Hamilton, vice president of American Locomotives . . . Incidentally, Earl Browder was expelled as boss of the Communist Party for repeatedly arguing that Russia and capitalist America could live together harmoniously.

Capital News Capsules

Kansas City Cleanup—Most interesting fact developed at the Kansas City crime probe is that big racketeers are carefully obeying Federal laws. They aren't afraid of State and city laws where local officials are easier to bribe. But they are afraid of Federal laws . . . That's why the underworld is leaning over backward not to get caught in conspiracy. In Kansas City, at least, they operate in small groups, rather than in syndicates that cross State lines.

What McCarthy Said

Secretary of State Acheson now has two affidavits from people who heard and recorded Senator McCarthy's famous speech at Wheeling, W. Va., stating that the State Department had 205 card-carrying Communists. The manager of the local radio station, who recorded McCarthy's speech, is one of those who is giving the State Department an affidavit.

BYRD'S LOBBY—Senators can thank their colleague, Harry Byrd of Virginia, for increasing their office work. Byrd secretly inspired a flood of telegrams to Congress on deficit spending. He even dictated what several groups should say in their wires to Congress. The Farm Equipment Association promptly appealed to its dealers to carry out Byrd's bidding, but warned: "Please do not mention Senator Byrd's name in your telegram to Congressmen, and change the wording around so that all wires will not read the same."

PROPAGANDA TRAP—Secretary of State Acheson sent word to United States Ambassador Lew Douglas in London to contact U. N. Secretary-General Trygve Lie and ask him to stay out of Moscow and not see Joseph Stalin. Acheson is afraid that Lie is walking into a propaganda trap; that Lie might be Moscow's excuse for a new Soviet propaganda drive which would mean nothing.

U. S. COLD-WAR STRATEGY—GHQ for the new cold war offensive will be the grimy old State, War and Navy building next to the White House. The planning of strategy will be by two agencies known to few Americans—the National Security Council and the National Security Resources Board. They will call the signals for the Defense Department, Atomic Energy Commission, the State Department, ECA, and other agencies. This explains why Stuart Symington, a heads-up operator, was taken from his post as Secretary of Air to run the Resources Board.

Women Voters To Map Program At Convention

A State-wide program of study and action for 1950-51 will be mapped by Virginia's League of Women Voters at its third annual convention at the Hotel Chamberlain, Old Point Comfort, May 12 and 13.

Major items to be recommended by the league's State board include a proposed analysis of the State budget, repeal of the poll tax as a prerequisite to voting, and improvement of the election registration system.

Speakers at the convention will include William B. Speck, a member of the Gray Tax Commission, who will discuss "Adequate Services in the State of Virginia," and Charles E. Planck, of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, who will talk on "Dollars and Public Relations."

To Hold VE-Day Fete
